Howe Disputes Bennett On Frobisher 'Delay'

RT. HON. C. D. HOWE... "silly nonsense."

By TOM GOULD
Trade Minister C. D. Howe today described Premier W. A. C. Bennett's charge that Ottawa's Bill 3 has delayed the huge Frobisher development in northwestern B.C. "silly nonsense."

Premier Bennett said last week the federal government is entirely responsible for a delay to the $270,000,000 project, which the Frobisher interests is the result of "potentially serious international complications."

He said the Americans had been "aroused" by Canada's hard bargaining on the Columbia River basin, and particularly by the introduction of Bill 3—the International Rivers Act. Bill 3, enacted at the spring session of the House of Commons, clarified federal government control on all rivers and streams which flow across the International Boundary.

Any firm, or provincial government, wanting to construct a hydro dam, or water diversion project, on such a river, is required to obtain a federal permit.

TO BLOCK KAISER?

Observers considered the bill was designed primarily to block B.C.'s deal with Kaiser Aluminum interests, who proposed construction of a $25,000,000 storage dam in B.C. on the Lower Arrow Lakes, to generate power on the Columbia River in the U.S.

Trade Minister Howe in an interview gave a firm denial to the premier's charge. He reaffirmed the national government's policy in the power-rich Canadian far north west.

He said statements that Bill 3 are responsible for the delay are "just silly."

And Mr. Howe said Robert Anderson, now head of the vast Frobisher-Ventures group, "called me up to say he was very disturbed at the remarks of Bennett in connection with Bill 3."

"If Frobisher wants a permit under Bill 3, they could have it tomorrow," said Mr. Howe.

CERTAIN RULES

The Frobisher project envisaged diversion of the headwaters of Yukon River, which originates in Canada, cutting off flow north through Alaska.

"It is a fact the Yukon River runs through the United States in Alaska. Nobody, however, knows if there are going to be complications," said Mr. Howe. "And if there were, we would be on the side of Frobisher and Bennett."

"When a river starts in one country, and flows through another, and water or power is taken off in the first country, there are certain rules which apply."

Mr. Howe referred to the 1909 Treaty, under which the U.S. forced on Canada what is Continued on Page 2

West, East Tie 6-6

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto (CP)—The East and West battled to a thriller-packed 6-6 tie today on a muddy and rain-soaked field in Canada's first all-star football game, climaxed by a wild finish.

A dull, uninspiring game erupted into a sensational ending in the final moments when both teams were fouled in attempts to break the deadlock on seldom-seen kick returns.

A crowd of 15,083, kept down by rainy weather that started at mid-morning and continued almost throughout the game, cheered wildly as the cream of Eastern and Western teams smashed around in the mud.

There was less than a minute to play when the West was turned back in its bid for victory. Bob Heydenfeldt of the Grey Cup winning Edmonton Eskimos punted into the eastern end zone and Cam Fraser promptly footed the ball back to him.

FAIL TO GIVE YARDS

Heydenfeldt kicked it again and an eastern player grabbed it at the 25, but the West failed to give yards and it was the eastern ball on its own 40.

Tom Dubinski, Toronto quarterback and star of the eastern line-up, passed 42 yards to Al Pfeiffer of the Argonauts to bring the East within kicking range for a single point.

Fraser booted a high ball into the arms of Jackie Parker, western quarterback, who immediately kicked the ball back as the gun sounded to end the game.

The game was sponsored by the Shriners and the Toronto Star Weekly. Proceeds will go to Shrine hospitals for crippled children at Montreal and Winnipeg.

The western team was given another play because Parker was roughed during the kick. The westerners froze the ball in one of the most unusual endings of a football game in the country's history.

6 Canadians Killed In RCAF Air Crash

EDITORIAL

Bread for the Hungry

Two years ago the Victoria Daily Times, in co-operation with the Unitarian Service Committee, launched a Christmas appeal for Korean war orphans called "A Bowl of Barley Gruel."

Warm-hearted Victorians responded generously.

Since that time, the idea of newspaper sponsorship of Christmas appeals for destitute children has caught on. This year, The Times will join six other newspapers—from Halifax to Victoria—a tri-country appeal for the needy of Korea, India and Greece.

The drive, which has the warm endorsement of Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent, will start Monday and run for two weeks.

The Times will launch the drive with an initial donation of $100.

The campaign will be called "Bread for the Hungry."

Monies raised will be acknowledged with the names of donors (or anonymously, if they so indicate) listed in the paper each day.

The funds will go to purchase Canadian flour for the impoverished children of the three countries, and to provide shelter, medical aid and educational facilities for those left homeless by earthquake and other natural disasters.

The Canada-wide goal of the Unitarian Service Committee, which works with International Red Cross in distribution facilities, is $110,000. In 1953, Victorians contributed more than $10,000 in two weeks.

The Times has warmly endorsed the drive because it feels that this affords an opportunity for rich, abundant Canada to make a practical gesture of aid to less-favored peoples.

The campaign will end here December 17 and it is hoped to have the total in hand by Christmas.

The Times believes that such giving is in the true spirit of the season.

Donations may be made at either the uptown or downtown (Broad Street) offices of Victoria Press Ltd., and will be handled by J. C. Melville, comptroller, and J. W. Stephen, office manager, of the company. Interim receipts will be sent to Unitarian Service Committee headquarters in Ottawa and official receipts—deductible for tax purposes—from there to the homes of donors. Please include your address.

We hope you will find it in your hearts to remember "Bread for the Hungry."

Sproat Lake Residents Hear Defence of Dam

PORT ALBERNI (Special)

Plans of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. for the raising of the low water level of Sproat Lake by two feet were reviewed Friday night by C. W. E. Locke, company engineer, at a stormy meeting of 125 members of the Sproat Lake Ratepayers' Association at the lake.

The development, Mr. Locke said, will provide the water necessary for the operation of the pulp and paper mill extensions under construction at Alberni.

Plans call for construction of a dam in the Sproat River that will raise the lake's low water level by two feet. It will not affect the high water level.

"Fishways in the dam actually will permit the lake to drop to its normal low water point in an exceptionally dry year," Mr. Locke said. Variation of the lake between its all-time low and high levels is 11 feet, he said.

Association members feared the development would harm their lake front properties, and that perhaps the low dam was a "thin end of the wedge." "I think the meeting was less hostile at the end than at the beginning," Mr. Locke said.

The alleged attacker, Daniel Francis O'Connor, was arrested Friday night and is being held in custody in Nanaimo.

According to police, the attack took place at about 5:30 p.m. between the Qualicum Beach Hotel and CPR station, while Daniel Parker was on his way home from school.

As the lad passed some bushes, a man leaped out, carrying a 22 rifle, and forced the boy at gunpoint to proceed up the road with him.

At this point Daniel's brother

Wreck in France Injures Eight; One 'Critical'

MONTMEDY, France (CP)—An RCAF transport plane carrying 17 Canadians crashed today as it was making a ground-controlled approach at the Marville air base in bad weather, killing six persons and injuring eight others.

A French farmer was the first person to arrive at the scene of the accident in this railway junction town near Marville and reported saving two officers and a woman member of the RCAF from the wreckage.

One of the injured is in critical condition.

Three escaped without injury and the seven others were only slightly hurt.

The plane, a twin-engine Bristol freighter used to supply and ferry Canadians between bases in England and on the Continent, came down in a clump of trees at 11:20 a.m.

NAMES WITHHELD
Names of the four-man crew and 13 passengers, many of them on their way home for Christmas, will not be announced until next-of-kin have been informed.

The Bristol, one of five based at Langar, England, was flying from Gros Tenguin, headquarters of the No. 2 Canadian Fighter Wing, to Marville to pick up more passengers before continuing the flight to Langar. Marville is headquarters of the No. 1 Canadian Fighter Wing.

The crash was believed to have occurred when the Bristol landed short of the Marville air strip during foggy weather. The plane was a complete wreck but did not catch fire.

The flight from Gros Tenguin to Marville was 62 miles. When the crash occurred, rescue teams from Marville base and the population of the nearby village hurried out to drag the dead and injured from the wreckage.

RCAF officers and the local police opened an investigation to determine the cause of the accident.

Informed circles here said that one such development may be the "retirement" of Molotov, whose star in the Communist skies appeared to be waning of late under the growing influence of pudgy party boss Nikita S. Khrushchev.

2 A.M. DEADLINE HINTED FOR NEW YEAR'S PARTIES

The Attorney-General's Department is going to wink at New Year's Eve celebrations, until 2 a.m.

At least that is the interpretation placed on a news release from the A-G's Department Friday, which said celebration of New Year's Eve is a matter for local police administration, and added:

"In view of former practice, the Attorney-General's Department does not expect to receive complaints about public parties conducted up to 2 a.m."

New Year's Day this year is a Sunday, and by law all public parties must stop at midnight.

German Reds Threaten New Berlin Blockade

BERLIN (UP)—A West German government spokesman announced today the East German Communists have threatened free Berlin's lifelines by refusing to renew yearly shipping permits for barges bringing supplies to the Western sector.

The Communist refusal could halt all waterways traffic to West Berlin from West Germany Jan. 1.

It was a direct outgrowth of the Soviet grant of sovereignty to East Germany and the transfer of control over German traffic to Berlin from Soviet authorities to German Communists.

In an open bid for recognition by the West, the Communists informed West German authorities in Bonn that the East and West German traffic ministries must negotiate on the future of canal traffic through the Soviet zone to West Berlin.

The Communist act underlined the Soviet and East German contention that East Germany now is sovereign and four-power agreements on Germany no longer are in force.

Western right of free access to Berlin and the right of free movement within all of Berlin is based on such four-power agreements.

The official mouthpiece of the East German Communist regime claimed a treaty the Reds signed with the Soviets gave them "unconditional" control of vital supply lines to free West Berlin.

The official Communist party newspaper Neues Deutschland said the treaty gave the Red regime full control over traffic between Berlin and West Germany. It failed to mention a Soviet promise to maintain Soviet control over Allied traffic.

UN Approves Ike's Plan For A-Agency

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UP)—The 60-member United Nations General Assembly today called for the establishment "without delay" of an international atomic energy agency to govern President Eisenhower's "atoms-for-peace" plan.

The Assembly unanimously adopted a resolution proposing that the agency which President Eisenhower proposed two years ago in an address at the United Nations be set up.

U.S. delegate Sen. John O. Pastore told the Assembly, meeting in its first Saturday plenary session this year, that representatives of the United States, Russia, Britain and nine other nations will meet in Washington Jan. 23, 1956, to begin negotiations on setting up the proposed international atomic energy agency (IAEA).

Truman Apologizes For Lend-Lease Error

WASHINGTON (CP)—Former president Harry Truman has apologized for an inference contained in his recently published memoirs that Canada received U.S. lend-lease aid during the Second World War.

In a letter to Canadian Ambassador A. D. P. Heeney, Truman expressed regret at the oversight and said it had been caught and corrected in the final proofs of his book, "Year of Decisions."

However, it had gone uncorrected in an instalment of the memoirs appearing in the New York Times.

His letter, replying to one from Heeney a month ago, expressed admiration for the fighting qualities of Canadian troops during the war.

In the instalment appearing in The Times, Truman included Canadians among Commonwealth troops equipped with U.S. lend-lease weapons. Heeney, in drawing his attention to the error, noted that Canada had operated its own mutual aid program and in fact had overpaid the United States for war equipment bought from the Americans.

MUMPS CASES NO CAUSE FOR ALARM—MAHAFFY

There is no cause for alarm in spite of a mounting total of mumps cases in city schools, according to Victoria-Esquamalt medical health officer, Dr. Elizabeth Mahaffy.

There have been 47 cases reported in the last week, bringing the year's total to 84—66 in November. In 1952 there were 1,374 cases reported; in 1948, 146; 1949, 282; 1950, 238; 1951, 330; 1953, 60, and 1954, 57.

The disease comes in cycles, she stated. Most current cases are at the grade-one level and no adult cases have been reported. Indications are that incidence this year will be lower than normal.

Mayor Harrison Outlines Platform

Relucting slightly on his no-campaign, no-platform announcement, Mayor Claude Harrison said Friday if he is re-elected he will strive to keep the tax rate down. He will endeavor to win "a good deal" from provincial and federal governments for Victoria. He will work for reduced water rates and he will work for maximum development of local parks. The mayor said he will also support improvements to the sewer system, a new Point Ellice Bridge and changes at the Fountain Circle. He emphasized that the present tax rate income will have to be used and distributed . . . "and I think it should be sufficient." "I'm going to go on reducing the per capita debt until we stand away down on the list of Canadian cities in Canada, but in my four years in office it has been reduced from $248 to $221. We no longer are in first place in the list of cities of comparable size." He said he wanted time to complete matters of importance before both senior governments. "Victoria has been kept on an even keel—no hysteria, no stampede, no new foolish ventures," he added.

LONDON (UP)—A commuter train loaded with Friday night fun seekers plowed into the rear of a halted freight train early today, killing 12 persons in a "hell" of fire and blazing electricity. At least 33 injured persons were pulled from the burning heap of wreckage at tiny Barnes station, 10 miles southwest of London. The freight train had stopped for a signal just outside the station. The four-coach electric-commuter train, carrying about 150 persons from a night on the town in London, smashed into the freight and turned on its side.

The first coach of the London-to-Windsor "theatre special" toppled across the third rail of the electric line and exploded into 100-foot flames.

HEAT MELTS ROADWAY Rails were twisted like spaghetti. An overhead high-voltage bridge confined the heat and the surface of the roadway was melted, preventing first approaches by rescue workers.

Passengers, many of them in evening dress, screamed in agony as they struggled to escape from the small compartments typical of British passenger trains.

The dead included two children, two women and eight men, two of them trainmen.

Police believed all the bodies had been recovered. They said all the dead had either burned to death or been electrocuted.

TRAPPED BY FLAMES Cries of agony from trapped passengers could be heard above the roaring of the flames.

Police constable Thomas Oliver said he had to "hack my way into hell" to get to the victims. "There was electricity sizzling all around us and great blue flames shooting up the line in all directions."

Oliver found motorman Alfred Blanders, his clothes aflame, lying on the floor in the front car of the commuter train. "There are others in there—don't worry about me," Blanders said. He was treated for severe burns.

Residents of a nearby housing project, many of them clad only in pyjamas despite the biting cold, joined 250 firemen and policemen in the rescue operation.

SURVIVOR'S STORY Alfred Lester was a passenger in one of the back coaches. After the crash, he said, "the electricity seemed to be flashing all around us. I could hear people screaming and the next thing I remember was someone dragging open the door above us and hauling us out of the compartment."

Short-circuiting of the electric tracks which provided power for the trains was believed to have caused the fire, which licked at the supports of a highway bridge overhead.

Reginald Clift, a building contractor who lived nearby, told newsmen: "There was a violent flash, then a bang and a series of blue sparks and we could see the train slipping sideways off the track. The whole roadway over the lines shook."

It was Britain's second major rail mishap in two weeks. On Nov. 20, an excursion train jumped the tracks at Stevenage, killing 10 and injuring 106.

It will increase so that the people of B.C. will derive the maximum benefits. In a brief outline of Canadian hydro policy, he said "we feel, and I am sure this view is shared by the majority of people living in B.C., as in the rest of Canada, that we should not give our water resources away for the long term, and certainly not in perpetuity."

"We must first find out whether we can make effective use of these water resources within Canada. If it is in our national interest to increase the down-river utilization of water in another country, as the result of works undertaken in Canada, then we must make sure that Canadians obtain benefits commensurate with the water resources thus being provided to our neighbors."

Mr. Howe said he is confident the U.S. and Canada can work out "arrangements, to encourage development and economic expansion of both countries."

PERSPECTIVE NEEDED "We must therefore seek a perspective and look at all the potentialities of power development if we are not to make mistakes and deprive future generations of Canadians of the benefits that will accrue from a sound and integrated development of our resources."

"This is the reason why the Canadian government has initiated surveys to determine the most effective use of the power potential of the Columbia and Fraser Rivers and their tributaries; has asked for an examination to discover the best possible ways of resolving the conflicting interests of salmon fisheries and hydro power interests."

He said the Canadian government has also "asked the Canadian Parliament to pass the International Rivers Bill to ensure that construction, operation and maintenance of international river improvements are carried out in an orderly fashion, and in a manner that will best serve the national interest."

Mr. Howe said B.C. government is represented on working committees engaged in the various studies, and "we welcome this co-operation, and we hope is the Taku-Yukon-Atlin project now dead? Mr. Howe was asked.

"No," he replied. "This does not mean they are not going to go ahead with it."

The next question was: "What if Forbisher eventually decides not to go ahead with the Taku project . . . because it cannot obtain the necessary customers for the power. Would Canada allow another firm, particularly the Aluminum Co. of America, which has competed for the power, to alienate our water (and/or power) for use in an Alaska-based plant?"

Mr. Howe's reply again was an emphatic "no!"

"No, we would not. That has been our policy since 1909."

He repeated his answer a third time, for emphasis: "No, we would not, even if Mr. Bennett wanted us to alienate it."

NO STUMBLING BLOCKS On the question of whether the Americans are placing hurdles in the way of the Forbisher project, Mr. Howe said

Politicians Woo New U.S. Labor Giant

NEW YORK (AP)—The newly merged AFL-CIO is facing an almost immediate struggle by leaders of the two major United States political parties for the support of its 16,000,000 members.

Three 1956 presidential possibilities will address the unionists attending the first AFL-CIO convention here next week.

While the speeches are not billed as "political," they can be expected to reflect the Republican and Democratic philosophies.

The question is whether the Republicans can woo some of the traditional Democratic strength away from the labor movement.

The Republican party will lead with its ace—President Eisenhower—in convention speech-making. Eisenhower, who may or may not be a candidate for re-election, will address the delegates Monday by telephone from his Gettysburg, Pa., farm.

HARRIMAN NEXT The Democrats will get their chance later in the week to hold or strengthen their position.

Governor Averell Harriman of New York, a potential candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, will address the convention Tuesday. Adlai Stevenson, an announced Democratic aspirant, will get in the last word with a speech Thursday.

TIMES ELECTION FORUM

Candidates Favor New Bridge At Pt. Ellice; Methods Differ

Polished from appearances before electors at public meetings, Victoria candidates speak out loudly this week in the Times Election Forum on the question of a new Point Ellice Bridge.

Readers who have questions to ask of candidates will have one more opportunity in this department before Dec. 8 elections. Questions should be limited—one to a letter and be brief.

Here is the question chosen from the forum mailbox this week: "Would you favor immediate replacement of the Point Ellice Bridge and if so, would you support a money-by-law being presented to the electors as early as possible?"

Vic. West Resident. Mayor Claude Harrison has refused to answer further questions in the forum.

Mayorality Candidate Percy B. Searnah: "As I have stated in my announced platform, I feel that the new bridge will have to be built without either federal or provincial government aid."

"But it can be done without asking passage of a money-by-law, or by increasing the tax rate. We have already on hand, from land sales, almost $300,000. Assuming we need even as much as $300,000 more, it could be borrowed and repaid from future land sales at the rate of $10,000 a year over a ten-year period."

Aldermanic candidate M. H. Mooney: "I support the early construction of a new bridge and would be pleased to see government aid forthcoming. But I think we should find out if the people want it . . . if the people want it, I'll support it."

"If I'm re-elected I will attempt to learn public opinion before putting a by-law to the people. I think we can find out what the public wants without putting the question to them in a money-by-law."

Aldermanic candidate William F. Pinfold: "I voted for that in council . . . a money-by-law."

Aldermanic candidate Geoffrey I. Edgewood: "I feel there is a plan underway in the putting away of land sales money. We have about $265,000 now. It is reasonable to expect that within a year we will have increased this amount to the point where we could build the bridge without going to the people for more money."

Aldermanic candidate Capt. D. J. Proudfoot: "The question has its pros and cons . . . I have no doubt a new bridge is necessary, but if it can't be repaired and used as a proper section of highway, then scrap it and put in a new four-lane bridge."

"This would mean buying additional property at both ends and might increase the cost to close to $1,000,000."

"As it is the bridge is useless. "I can't say that I would support a money-by-law unless the type of bridge and costs are fully known."

Aldermanic candidate Hugh Ramsay: "I'm in favor of a new bridge immediately but think the people should make the decision for themselves. That is why I would favor a money-by-law. Let the people speak on the matter . . . after all they are paying for it."

Aldermanic candidate Elmer D. McEwen: "I think the new bridge should have a different location and that it should be carefully planned, then the provincial and federal governments asked for assistance. There must be almost enough money at hand now in the bridge fund and I don't think a money-by-law is necessary."

"However, if the two senior governments don't aid in the project . . . then we should immediately launch a money-by-law."

Aldermanic candidate Elgin Neish: "There should be a high level bridge here for better approach to the mills in the upper harbor; it's long overdue. Action should be taken. If any report has been drafted on needs as far as this bridge is concerned, it should be made public. Larger boats can't get in and out."

Aldermanic candidate Joe North: "I certainly agree that the good people of Victoria West should have a new bridge . . . but the government should be required to share in the cost."

Aldermanic Candidate Charles W. Hunt: "If Point Ellice Bridge is unsafe, and this is one of the points I shall check into if elected, naturally I think it should be replaced. A lot of people are going around it now, rather than use the bridge. If replacement is needed I advocate a two-span bridge. I definitely intend to check into the matter."

Aldermanic Candidate Miss Jane Hall: "Due to the limitations of space and her desire not to give an incomplete answer, Miss Hall requested not to be quoted on this question."

Aldermanic candidates Mrs. Lily Wilson and Arthur K. Kingsley were not available for interview.

'Trigger' Burke Guilty of Murder

NEW YORK (UP)—An all-male jury convicted Elmer (Trigger) Burke Friday night of first degree murder for the barroom slaying of a drinking pal. The death sentence is mandatory.

Burke's attorney said he would appeal the verdict.

The thin, 35-year-old gunman was accused of shooting Edward (Fochy) Walsh in a Manhattan saloon in July of 1952. Burke, who pleaded innocent by reason of insanity, contended he was so intoxicated the night of Walsh's death that he did not remember what happened.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Monday

VANCOUVER, Dec. 3—New home treatment methods for preventing baldness—and growing thicker hair—will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, December 5 and 6.

This news was released here today by F. E. Lee, internationally famous director of Lee, Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In his announcement, Lee named staff trichologist R. M. Locklin to conduct the Victoria clinic. Locklin will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the Hotel Sussex.

Examine You Free

"I want to make it clear that you incur no charge or obligation by seeing Mr. Locklin," director Lee said.

"Your only obligation is to yourself—to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Lee home treatment, Mr. Locklin will frankly tell you so. But less than five per cent of the people we examine are 'hopeless.'"

Offers No Cure-All Lee emphasized that his new home treatment is neither "mail-order" nor "cure-all."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment," he pointed out. "There is no cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause most baldness."

Lee said that sometimes your treatment must be changed after a few weeks to get best results. "For this reason, you mail regular reports of your hair progress to the Lee headquarters in Vancouver or Montreal."

"Also, your scalp condition is checked personally by a Lee trichologist at regular intervals."

Who Can Be Helped? Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No," said Lee sincerely. "We can not help men who are sick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait till it's too late! Best evidence of the success of Lee treatment is the phenomenal growth of the organization behind it. Lee and his affiliates maintain 15 treatment clinics in Canada, the U.S., and Mexico. And their staff trichologists regularly do extension work in more than 100 other cities.

Satisfy 90% "Your biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do," declared Lee. "We satisfy more than 90 per cent of our clients, and have records to prove it."

"But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desperate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Lee trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair: That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

Guarantee Satisfaction "To help overcome the average man's skepticism, we now offer him a 30-DAY GUARANTEE," Lee said. "You must be satisfied with your hair progress by the end of 30 days or your money will be returned."

If you're worried about your hair, call the Hotel Sussex Monday or Tuesday for Mr. Locklin's suite number, then come to see him between 1 and 9 p.m. for a free examination.

You don't need an appointment. You won't be embarrassed or obligated in any way.

Netherlands Freezes Price of Newsprint

THE HAGUE, The Netherlands (UP)—The government has frozen the price of newsprint manufactured in The Netherlands at the level of last November 24.

The action announced Friday prevented the Dutch newsprint industry from putting into effect an announced price increase scheduled for next January 1. The decree said the action was taken because the industry refused to permit government economists to investigate newsprint industry profit margins.

'Don't Change' Howe Warns

Exports, Sound Money Vital To Record Canadian Growth

An "about turn" in "tried and true" economic policies would be unwise for Canada, Trade and Commerce Minister C. D. Howe said here Friday night.

He was addressing 800 persons at a public meeting in Central Junior High School.

Said the minister: "There are those who would turn to trade restrictions under the guise of encouraging processing of raw materials in Canada."

"The present government believes in as much processing of raw materials before export as possible."

"But it seriously doubts whether it would be in the national interest to make an about turn in trade policies to achieve that end."

Mr. Howe also noted there are some who advocate a fundamental change in Canada's monetary and banking system.

"I can think of nothing more calculated to damage Canadian economic prospects than the adoption of 'funny money' theories of finance."

He stressed he doesn't think government policies should remain static. They should be flexible enough to deal with the developing situation.

Trade Figures Prove Policy Sound

"But there are certain general guiding principles which, in my view, remain as sound now as they were when we adopted them towards the end of the war as the foundations of Canadian economic policy."

He said the government sees no reason to abandon policies which have produced such good overall results.

Postwar experience had confirmed wisdom of a "free economy" rather than a regimented one, the minister said.

"By adhering to the kind of policies and pursuing the general objectives we laid down before the end of the war, Canada is stronger today than it would have been if, on the one hand, the government had been less courageous or, it had committed itself to a rigid plan."

He said that while budget surpluses were apt to be called "over taxation," this was done deliberately, achieving a 17 per cent national debt reduction and contributing to strengthening and stabilizing of the economy.

"These fiscal principles are still sound," he said, and should command confidence of both Canadians and non-Canadians who have an investment interest in this country."

Free Trade Essential to Canada

Canada gave world leadership, he said, in postwar efforts to reduce trade barriers.

"Canada has more to gain than any other country from the reduction of trade barriers," he said; "this country could not hope to gain increased access to foreign markets without giving reciprocal concessions in return."

This had been demonstrated convincingly by exports, increased 68 per cent in value and 17 per cent in volume between 1946 and 1954.

The government target of $175-billion, in terms of 1945 prices, in postwar exports had been exceeded in every postwar year—and in 1954 by no less than 40 per cent.

"With such a tremendous stake in trade, Canada has no alternative but to continue to work for reduction of barriers which still hamper access of Canadian goods to outside markets, and our own tariff policies must be governed accordingly."

Export trade was the greatest force influencing national income and employment, he said. If businessmen are persuaded the government works with them, helping find new markets, "I believe they will be encouraged to take risks. It is no accident Canada is regarded as a preferred area for foreign investors."

Mr. Howe predicted that the gross national product this year may exceed $26 billion, "nine per cent above last year, and seven per cent above 1953, the previous record year."

World Wheat Collapse Prevented

On grain, the minister said he felt certain Canada would sell more than the average crop this year—and added that there "is no better insurance policy than wheat in farmers' bins."

Each year during the past four, 100 million bushels had been moved through Canada's Pacific ports, twice as much each year as in previous years.

"When I receive complaints that the government is neglecting the interests of these Pacific ports... I wonder whether those who complain have had a good look at the figures..."

Chief reason for increased use of ports was sale of wheat and barley to Japan.

"We have been doing everything possible to encourage the Japanese to buy Canadian grain."

There have been general difficulties in marketing the unusually heavy wheat crops, and because of surplus disposal policies in the United States, he said.

But government policy had prevented a collapse of world wheat markets "to the advantage of B.C. no less than the Prairie provinces."

Gas Line Will Boost B.C. Tempo

Mr. Howe said the recent decision of the U.S. Federal Power Commission, allowing import of Canadian gas, means "one of B.C.'s most promising development projects," with resulting gas available at many points in the province, en route from the Peace River block to the border.

This, he predicted, would increase the whole tempo of industrial expansion in B.C., and have a "tremendous" effect on the provincial economy.

The $150 million undertaking meant new employment, increased freight revenues and increased government revenues in forms of royalties.

"But the chief benefit will consist of the many opportunities for establishment of new secondary industries in B.C. and expansion of existing ones."

This year would doubtless prove to be the best year in the economic history of the province, reflecting current prosperity in forestry, construction and manufacturing, Mr. Howe said. Higher values for minerals in general may bring the total value of this year's production above that of 1954.

Retail trade in B.C. has been running about 11 per cent ahead of 1954, he said, and higher earnings and employment and stable prices "promise a landslide pre-Christmas season for B.C. merchants."

Council as 'Board of Editors' Hacks Away at Zoning By-Law

By PETE LOUDON

City council sat Friday as a panel of editors, chopping phrases, sharpening definitions and compounding officialese in a clause-by-clause overhaul of the proposed 1955 zoning by-law.

In two hours the council did not get past the first page and a half and was undecided at the end of the meeting on the wording of the preface.

At that rate of progress, completion of the study will take 9 hours, a longer period of time than council has sat on all other civic business this year.

The meeting ended following the decision to send the whole by-law to the city solicitor and additional counsel if needed to reword according to legal requirements.

"It was the most disgraceful meeting I've ever attended," said Ald. W. F. Pinfold—and that covers six years. During its course, he refused to apologize to Mayor Claude Harrison for the remark that the mayor was "blocking" progress.

"He's not interested in it... he's against the whole thing," stated Ald. M. F. Mooney while the word battle raged.

Examples of the mayor's objections were (a) the use of ures in brackets after written numbers, and (b) the use of the phrase "adjoining ground" where he required "ground immediately adjoining."

The delays brought the remark from Ald. Mooney, "We'll be here until long after I'm defeated at the polls."

But the mayor maintained that the by-law, in spite of its four-year preparation and its presentation to council in March of this year, its scrutiny by department heads, its numerous amendments, two public hearings, and its recent blocking by a demand for clause-by-clause study, was not yet ready for council to pass upon.

"When the by-law is complete in all respects, and ready for passing, then we shall go through it, then the preamble, then the title," said Mayor Harrison. He insisted council could do nothing until it was reworded by counsel.

City solicitor Arthur Patton said that would take "possibly a month."

Only Ald. Dowell and Ald. Edgelow voted against the return of the by-law to the solicitor.

The meeting concluded on a sour note when Ald. Mooney asked Ald. Robert Macmillan if he didn't think the by-law should be discussed before going to the solicitor.

Ald. Macmillan warned that unless the procedure outlined by the mayor and laid down in by-law were followed, "I may, or someone else may, call for another clause-by-clause perusal when it comes back."

"There are many things in the by-law I don't think are correct, if you'll keep your mouth shut for 15 minutes I'll tell you."

Council voted upon whether Ald. Macmillan should have the floor for 15 minutes to speak on the by-law. But only Ald. Mooney and Ald. Arthur Dowell approved.

Saanich Faces Hot Campaign

First Election Meeting Monday At Royal Oak; Issues Galore

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Three candidates for the reeveship of Saanich and 13 candidates for four council seats, started today to "clear the decks" for what is expected to be one of the hottest municipal elections in the history of Saanich.

In addition, a lively election battle is shaping up between three contestants for one vacant seat on the police commission.

The issues to be aired by candidates include a sewer project of nearly $600,000, charges of inefficiency in the management of the municipality, and the failure of the municipality to keep records and accounts of gravel taken out of a municipal pit.

There will also be plenty of side-issues. These will include the need for parks and the necessity for a town planning program to curb rising costs for municipal services, such as water and roads.

The opening salvo of the election battle will be fired at an Elk Lake Ratepayers' Association meeting at 8 p.m. at the Women's Institute Hall, Royal Oak, Monday. All candidates will be present to outline their platforms and to speak for or against the present council administration.

THREE OTHERS

Candidates will speak at three other meetings during the week. On Tuesday, they will address a meeting sponsored by the Saanich Voters' Association at 8 p.m. at St. Luke's Hall, and a public meeting on Wednesday at Mount View High School at 8 p.m.

The last election meeting will be held on Friday at the CCF Hall on Douglas Street. This meeting has been especially arranged so that candidates can be questioned on the sewer deficit which is this year's main election issue.

The main election contest will be a three-way fight between Reeve Joseph Casey, Arthur Ash, former M.L.A., and George Clayton, retired manufacturer, for the reeveship of Saanich. Ten other councillors will battle for three two-year term council seats.

Only one candidate has dropped out of the municipal election. He is Fred Davidson, traffic manager for the B.C. Electric Co.

THE FAMOUS CRACK IN THE UNITED STATES LIBERTY BELL IS A POWERFUL REMINDER OF THE STRANGE FACTS CONCERNING THE ORIGIN OF THIS FAMOUS BELL. IN 1751 THE ORIGINAL LIBERTY BELL WAS CAST IN LONDON AND SHIPPED TO PHILADELPHIA TO BE ERRECTED IN THE STATE HOUSE TOWER. HOWEVER WHILE BEING TESTED FOR TONE IT CRACKED. IT WAS MELTED DOWN IN PHILADELPHIA AND COPPER ADDED AND A SECOND BELL WAS CAST BUT THIS ALSO WAS NOT SATISFACTORY. A THIRD CASTING PRODUCED A BELL THAT STOOD THE TEST SO IT WAS HUNG IN THE STATE TOWER JUNE 7TH, 1753. THE FIRST IMPORTANT OCCASION ON WHICH IT WAS RUNG WAS ON JULY 8TH, 1776 UPON THE OCCASION OF THE PROCLAMATION OF THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE, WHICH HAD BEEN ADOPTED 4 DAYS EARLIER. THE NEXT YEAR THE BELL WAS REMOVED AND HIDDEN BENEATH THE FLOOR OF A CHURCH IN ALLENTOWN, PA. SO IT WOULD NOT BE CAPTURED BY THE BRITISH. IN 1778 IT WAS TAKEN BACK TO THE STATE TOWER IN PHILADELPHIA WHERE IT WAS RUNG ON EVERY FESTIVAL DAY. THE STRANGE CLIMAX TO THIS STORY OCCURRED IN 1835 ON THE ANNIVERSARY OF THE FIRST IMPORTANT DAY THAT THE BELL WAS RUNG, FOR ON JULY 8TH, DURING THE FUNERAL OF CHIEF JUSTICE MARSHALL THE 32 YEAR OLD BELL CRACKED AND IT SO REMAINS TODAY.

This Is Our Water

RECENT STATEMENTS FROM the British Columbia and Federal Governments leave the future of the Yukon River in doubt. The questions thus unanswered are of the highest national importance, since the Yukon contains some of the largest undeveloped electrical power in the world and its development, or lack of development, must deeply affect the future economy of British Columbia.

Mr. Bennett says that the Fro-bisher-Ventures interests have merely postponed their plan to divert some of the Yukon's water southward into Taku Inlet, and there build a gigantic mineralogical industry in Canadian territory just east of the Alaska Panhandle. He blames this postponement on the Federal Government's legislation of last spring, which redefines, without increasing federal control over, all international rivers like the Yukon.

Mr. Winters, federal minister of public works, who formerly administered federal water policy, denies Mr. Bennett's statement. He says, quite rightly, that the new legislation will not delay the Taku scheme. Trade Minister Howe made the same point here last night, saying a permit, if sought by Fro-bisher, would be granted immediately.

The public, however, will be chiefly interested to find out whether the Taku scheme is temporarily postponed or permanently abandoned.

Its promoters intend to build a power plant on the Nass River, which flows only through Canadian territory. Is this an alternative or an addition to the Taku scheme? On that point all public announcements so far are extremely vague.

The much larger question for the future is whether the Canadian Government will ever allow Yukon water to be diverted into Alaska, as proposed by the Aluminum Company of America.

This corporation applied long ago for the right to dam the Yukon and carry some of its water through a tunnel to the coast of the Panhandle and there build the world's largest aluminum industry.

Mr. Winters, as the responsible minister, formally rejected this project. In various public speeches he made clear that the Government stands by its policy of refusing to alienate any Canadian water to the United States, even if this water cannot be used immediately in Canada. The Government regards such water, and electricity made from it, as a capital Canadian asset which must not be exported.

Undoubtedly American interests will continue to seek the right to use Yukon water, on the ground (as they have candidly said) that Canada cannot use it. Possibly Canada cannot use it at the moment, but government policy must look years, even centuries ahead.

The Yukon unquestionably should be preserved for future Canadian use under conditions not yet foreseeable. Once its water is alienated it can never be recaptured. Once water, or electrical exports are allowed it will be impossible to stop them, as Canada discovered years ago when it vainly attempted to cancel the sale of Ontario electricity in the United States.

We cannot build up American industries and communities on our power and then pull the switch at our convenience. The water or electricity may be exported for a fixed term of years but that limitation means nothing. The loss is permanent.

Will the Canadian Government stand by its policy in the case of the Yukon? There is good reason to believe it will, whatever happens to the postponed Taku Inlet scheme.

As Others See Us

SPEAKING IN HIS CONSTITUENCY of Oak Bay the other night, Mr. Archie Gibbs, M.L.A., produced a fascinating document. It was published by Liberty Free Press, 1848 48th Avenue, Oakland, California, and is called U.S.A. Social Creditor. Mainly it is devoted to misinformation and to praise of Premier Bennett, but it would be unfair to blame him for his American friends.

The Social Creditors of the United States, if any, are informed by this publication that British Columbia has benefited, under the Bennett Government, from "drastic reductions of consumers' taxes (and) removal of a large portion of dreaded sales taxes."

This will come as happy news indeed to British Columbians who, oddly enough, were under the impression that the sales tax had been increased from 3 to 5 per cent.

The various other accomplishments of the Bennett Government are outlined under such headlines as this: "British Columbia, Canada, sets the pace for good government. Social Credit leads the way!"

Apparently the American wing of Social Credit is chiefly impressed by British Columbia's heavy reduction in debt. The public is informed of a fall in what the Government chooses to call the debt; it is not told that, at the same time, the Government has vastly increased the real debt by borrowings through its various subsidiary organs. Nor do the American propagandists bother to mention that British Columbia levies the highest per capita taxes in Canada, possibly in America.

All this is to be expected—a faithful American version of the party line here. Where the "U.S.A. Social Creditor" got its information about British Columbia we do not know. But the public is entitled to the usual three guesses.

Progressing Backwards

THE CITY COUNCIL HAS FOLLOWED a highly unusual procedure in seeking tenders from private firms to handle its legal business.

This course has been pursued in an exploratory fashion only. Nothing decisive has been done. But the mayor and aldermen presumably want to know if they can farm out the duties of a city solicitor and city prosecutor in a way which will provide efficient service at a cost below the salaries of full-time appointees to those two posts.

That practice is followed by some small municipalities whose business scarcely warrants full time professional help. Certainly it would have been an acceptable arrangement had city government in its present form existed within the palisades of old Fort Victoria.

For a corporation doing a $6 million a year business, however, the proposal seems inconceivable. The city, and the City Council, require a full time solicitor to guard against mistakes. The aldermen, for instance, should never again be placed in the ridiculous position in which they found themselves, through lack of legal advice, when they planned to submit a money-spending question in referendum form, rather than as a money-by-law to property-owners.

It is part of the duties of a solicitor to avert such errors, just as it is another part of his duties to draft by-laws and attend to the day-to-day legal business of a big concern. He also provides a base of continuity even when councils change.

The question of farming out city legal work raises another interesting point: How does the profession in Victoria accept such a suggestion? Does it approve an advertisement asking its members to place their wares on the bargain counter? A survey indicates that the profession is not favorably impressed.

Perhaps, on second thought, the council will withdraw the proposal. After all, Victoria is a city, and as a city it needs competent and loyal staff, including men of high professional ability, to serve it.

NUISANCE TAX

Aldermanic candidate Hugh Ramsay is quoted as saying "lawyers and real estate firms who make use of City Hall services daily without charge should be considered as a new source of civic revenue."

He suggests a charge for tax certificates of $1.00.

The Land Registry demands a certificate showing that all of current taxes are paid in order to protect the buyer in a transfer, and also to assure payment of land taxes.

Mr. Ramsay implies that the lawyers and real estate firms will have to pay the proposed levy. Where they act for a buyer or seller they will, but the cost will be passed on to the citizen as surely as night follows day and the average citizen is already paying enough in property taxes to receive this small service (where necessary to effect a transfer of property) without charge.

A nuisance tax of this kind would necessitate a cheque being issued to the Victoria Corporation, a trip to the City Hall, delay in issuance, whereas a phone call to the tax department now will (with the usual good service) bring the desired certificate by first mail if not convenient to call at the City Hall.

The overburdened citizen and property taxpayers will pay, not the lawyers and agents.

GOLDEN RULE

Someone mentioned "fundamental truth." In the realm of progress it would be satisfying to know that authority had put its seal of approval on fair dealing. "I will play with you if you will play fair."

In assuming that you believe in justice, so let us abide by the tenets of "The Golden Rule." Fair enough?

So do you know that our whole economic system is based on usury, on interest and profit? It is approved and sanctioned that I am permitted to exploit you for personal gain. I'd like to see "peace on earth," but being party to an iniquitous economic system where the welfare of neighbors should be our chief concern, I don't see how it is possible, do you? And competing, instead of co-operating for the benefit of all, seems no less dishonest.

Wonder what Mr. Bennett could do with that problem!

HOME TO ROOST

The two Geneva conferences have passed into history, the sole product therefrom, the phantom Spirit of Geneva, has gone, nobody knows where, while Khrushchev and Bulganin are somewhere in India proclaiming their love and affection for the people of that country during their mission to liberate humanity from the yokes of the warmongers.

Backstage in Russia, a hydrogen bomb is set off to convince the world that the Communists can back up any claim they make as to quality and effectiveness of their ideological product to assure peace at all times.

Sir Winston Churchill has suggested the conference of statesmen at the summit after surveying the alarming situation on this planet at the end of his career when he found international relations so dangerous, so confused and stubborn as never before in living man's memory.

Sir Winston, of course, didn't expect to cure that old reprobate, known as international diplomacy. It had been on a spree for the last fifty years or more and is now suffering from a gigantic hang-over which might prove fatal unless some palliative, even one of those shady propaganda crutches, is used.

There is a known cure for the ills of the human race, but a proper diagnosis would require a thorough case history of the patient which in turn would require the accumulated skeletons in diplomacy's cupboard of hypocrisy masquerading as "National Interest" or as "National Honour," covering up lust of power and greed.

Sir Winston and the writer could give the reader what the Yanks call the "low-down" in diplomacy's subtleties, and we can assure you it is not flattering to the white race: from the quelling of the Boxer Rebellion in China, the Russo-Japanese War, Fashoda, the Boer War, the Witches Caldon in the Balkans, not to forget the "Peaceful Penetration" of Morocco with a loan of 62 million francs to His Majesty the Sultan back in 1904.

Good Old Times, hatching the chickens now coming home to roost.

The cure for the ills of international relations is indicated by a most gracious act of our young Queen Elizabeth, inviting Albert Schweitzer to Buckingham Palace recently. It is he who diagnosed and prescribed in his Nobel Peace Prize lecture at Oslo Nov. 3, 1954, as follows: "The statesmen who have shaped the present world in the course of negotiations after each of these wars (referring to the two world wars) have not enjoyed much success. Their purpose was not to create situations which could have supplied a basis for developing a degree of well-being, they were engaged above all in drawing the consequences of victory and making them durable" . . .

The great and humble man's understanding of human problems, the example of his dedicated life to the promotion of human welfare might well serve as a guide to world peace among nations.

LOOSE ENDS

Never Ask the Facts

MY neighbor, Mr. Horace Snifkin, tells me he has watched with interest the proceedings of the Gordon Commission on Canada's economic prospects. But he thinks the Commission will never get down to the real economic problems of the nation.

Mr. Gordon and his colleagues, Mr. Snifkin admitted, could tell us how many people would live in Canada, at any given day in the next fifty years, assuming that the birth and immigration rates did not change, as they undoubtedly would.

It could tell us how much wealth we would have in 2,000 A.D., if we hadn't died meanwhile, which was practically certain; or how much industry we would own if the Americans hadn't bought it all up by that time.

IN short, the Commission could predict everything to the last decimal of a cent if everything went along as usual, which it never did.

Nevertheless, said Mr. Snifkin, the Commission, for all its expert equipment, could never find out what Mr. Snifkin wanted to know about the national economy. What was that, I ventured to ask.

Well, to begin with said Mr. Snifkin how could people afford to live at all these days? That was the vital question. For clearly it was quite impossible to live under present economic conditions and yet, in defiance of economics, of taxes, prices and the law of gravity itself, people apparently still did manage to live somehow, or at least walked around, when they were not driving.

ON second thoughts, Mr. Snifkin guessed that Mr. Gordon had better not peer too deeply into these matters.

If the Canadian people ever realized the facts of their own private economics they would probably be paralyzed with terror and very likely a revolution would follow.

The private economic system of the average Canadian family, in Mr. Snifkin's considered view, could work only so long as no one questioned it, since it obviously lived on trust, illusion and a stubborn rejection of facts.

It might be safe, however, to scout a little around the outer edges of the system and ascertain, for example, why it was that the poor had more television sets than the rich; why all the shadier streets of America sprouted a jungle of steel antennae while the better streets and wealthier classes could afford much fewer of these luxuries.

MR. Snifkin admitted that he was a man in comfortable circumstances but lacked the money for a television set; whereas his poorest neighbors were all wired for pictures and sound and thus led a life of culture and enlightenment while he still depended on the crude instrument of the printed word for information.

Again, the Commission might attempt to discover why women needed more clothes than men when a simple measurement would show that they had no more flesh to protect from the elements, rather less on average.

Refining that question further, why was it that women bought more garments than their husbands when they voluntarily exposed more skin to the weather? By any sane economic calculation men should need several times as much cloth to protect them as women but the opposite was the fact, and it seemed to Mr. Snifkin just another proof that economics was a fancy name for the inexplicable, irrational and mad.

IN its study of the nation's nutritional problems the Commission might tell us why no woman will waste an ounce of food, not a single stale crust, a mouldy piece of cheese or a rind of bacon but will force it somehow on her family in various disguises, and yet will gladly waste on her hairdressers, on perfumes, lipstick and especially on shoes (which never fit) enough money every month to feed a hundred Eskimos and their sled dogs.

Another economic problem of a still more essential nature puzzled Mr. Snifkin. Why was it, he asked, that the older he grew the weaker all government liquor seemed to become.

THIS phenomenon, he believed, could not be blamed entirely on the old-fashioned dilution strangled by the liquor board. No, something had happened to the pure article in the first place. As a man declined in strength so did every beverage, until it was necessary to consume twice as much to secure the same results.

In the same fashion, by some from law of economics, all weights were growing heavier, despite rigorous government inspection of the weighing scales, until a hundred pounds now weighed two hundred and similarly a mile's walk now stretched out to at least two miles.

MR. Gordon should also consider why the quality of all goods was being debased. No food had its old taste. The print in newspapers was shrinking, growing blurred and tended to dance on the page. The modern cars were much inferior to the models of three decades ago which a man could keep season after season, whereas the new ones had to be traded in every year or two.

In those days he said a refrigerator, a vacuum sweeper, a washing machine, and even a wife were considered good enough for a lifetime. None had any lasting power today. What did Mr. Gordon think about that? But why search for any facts, when we were doing very well by ignoring them?

MARIANNE HAS DOMESTIC TROUBLES

By B. A. TOBIN

French Cooking Produces a Political Stew

THE weaknesses of France's parliamentary system continue to crop up at the most critical times, hampering the nation in solving its domestic problems and frequently reducing it to near-impotence in international affairs.

Almost every premier of France has spent at least part of his time in office with a sword of Damocles over his head. The tenuous nature of Premier Mendes-France's hold on office, for instance, is still clearly in mind.

As he fought to settle the problems of the European Defence Community and German rearmament, of Indo-China and North Africa, he was continually beset by threats of defeat in the National Assembly and consequent sudden removal from office.

Pressing Problems

Political defeat did come to him while he was still in the throes of grappling with pressing problems. In the same way, a few days ago, it came to Premier Edgar Faure, the successor of M. Mendes-France and inheritor of many of his problems.

Moroccan and Algerian difficulties, in particular, have intensified in recent months, and there are still many internal problems to solve in the French homeland. In the midst of them, France is faced with the overthrow of the Government, and a general election to boot.

One of the country's chief political weaknesses is the multiplicity of small parties into which the Assembly is divided. While a leader may be able to enlist a majority of members to back him on one project, he has no guarantee that the same members will support him on another. There is a constant shifting of allegiances and strengths among the parties and splinter parties, some of them with only a handful of members.

Brief Tenure

Under such circumstances no government can long survive. The brevity of governmental tenure in France has long been a stock item for humorists.

A further defect lies in the fact that the fall of a government does not necessarily mean that an election will follow. The President selects a new leader who then tries to form a cabinet from the same material as before. Thus succeeding administrations retain the weaknesses of their predecessors.

The present case of Premier Faure has been an exception. Under a seldom-invoked section of the constitution, if the government of France is defeated twice within 18 months, a general election may be called. Since it is just 10 months since the Mendes-France regime fell, Premier Faure's defeat this week made the section applicable.

There were further complications, of course. A portion of the Assembly, including Premier Faure's own party, wished to wait until next summer to hold a general election (the end of the normal five-year term) in order that the electoral laws might first be changed. Under present law there is a complicated system of proportional representation and there has been a move to simplify this by re-establishing single-member constituencies.

But M. Faure's dissolution of the Assembly and his decree announcing an immediate election have foiled attempts at revision. The Assembly members will go to the country under the current electoral law.

This development so angered the Premier's party, the Radical Socialists, which long has advocated electoral changes, that it expelled him from the organization. He is now a premier without a party, and France, as it so often has been, is a country without a government.

Although France's general position appears to be much better than it was a year ago, there are still many problems to be met. The inflationary threat continues, there is a housing shortage, and far-reaching reforms are needed in the taxation system. The fundamental constitutional weaknesses are yet to be cured. Although the economic hemorrhage of the Indo-China fighting has ceased, with amputation of Indo-China from the French empire, there are other heavy financial drains.

The North African possessions cost many millions of dollars and even threaten to interfere with France's contribution of men and money to NATO.

In a sense the weaknesses at home have contributed to the difficulties abroad. France today, despite the support of its friends, faces serious rivalry for its proud position as leader of western Europe. West Germany is much more than a small cloud on the eastern horizon.

Intellectual Freedom

It is difficult to specify any single cause of the deterioration. The shock and attrition of two great wars and numerous minor ones must inevitably be felt. The "rugged individualism" of the Frenchman, a source of strength at times, may on other occasions contribute to lack of national cohesion. The traditional intellectual freedom and tolerance of France, so often hailed as its shining glory, may in some cases have soured into cynicism and negativism.

Communist inroads into labor organizations, less successful, perhaps, today, have served to weaken the industrial fabric. And, as mentioned, the governmental system, conducive to fragmentation and ineffective controversy, has further hampered progress.

Self Help

France is too great a nation to permit any attempts at interference from outside. The immediate withdrawal of French delegates from the United Nations when that body, under Arab and Soviet prompting, voted to discuss the Algerian situation, was to be expected. (The representatives have since returned, the debate having been cancelled.)

French rehabilitation must be achieved from within. The nation that has done so much for western culture must save itself. Only this could be permitted; only this could be effective.

With a Crank, a Needle and a Disc

(From The New York Times)

NOT as a protest to the present hi-fi fetish, but as a possible solution to a propaganda problem, comes a little hand-operated plastic phonograph developed by the Radio Corporation of America. The device, which weighs 10 ounces, could be manufactured for 50 cents.

Accompanied by unbreakable plastic records, phonographs might be dropped like leaflets over enslaved countries in Europe and Asia, bringing a spoken message to areas where radio jamming or the lack of electricity would otherwise make it impossible.

Those finding the phonographs would assemble them according to enclosed instructions, place a record on the small turntable, put the combination needle and sounding board in place, and twirl themselves a lesson in democracy.

No decision to use the phonograph for propaganda purposes has yet been made, but President Eisenhower was given one and enjoyed himself playing with it.

Who wouldn't? Its sheer simplicity is disarming. Nowadays our phonographs and their myriad accoutrements—diamond stylus, stroboscopes, woofers, tweeters, filters, compensators, electronics by the tubeful—are so complicated that we can reasonably expect them to perform well.

The plastic propaganda phonograph is another thing entirely. Just a plastic frame, a crank, a needle, another sheet of curving plastic, and a little disk; somehow these modest appliances produce a human voice, speaking clearly and in foreign tongues to boot.

Suddenly propaganda comes alive, as irresistible as an Erector set, a flutery-eyed doll, an electric train.

Speaking of toys, it may be recalled that a United States exhibit of toy trains was the unexpected sensation of a recent Indonesian trade show, luring spectators from far more elaborate industrial exhibits of other nations. Then there was U. Nu visiting New York last July, candidly enchanted by the array of toys in a five-and-ten-cent store.

What is the portent of it all? Only what we've known all along, that a colorful toy is a siren to children and adults alike. Keeping this in mind, our propagandists will succeed where others, attempting to purvey the paste of politics without some garnishment, have failed.

What kind of messages would go along with the plastic phonograph? Conventionally the spoken word is an effective propaganda vehicle, so the machine has been designed to reproduce sound frequencies between 500 and 4,000 cycles per second, more than adequate for the human voice but not entirely satisfactory for music.

Still, music may be enjoyed without the benefit of piquant highs or thunderclaps.

So, what about jazz, described by another Times correspondent this month as America's secret sonic weapon in propaganda warfare?

French Tip-Toe Back In

UNITED NATIONS—The French have come back, not with a flourish, but quietly, almost bashfully, with the delegates taking their seats in the committees here as if they had never been away. And so ends the first withdrawal of a delegation from an Assembly. It is true that their return was expedited because they were needed here; they were needed if the Canadian move to admit 18 new members to the United Nations was to be successful. Yet, having said that, it must be frankly admitted that the absence of the French for two months has been hardly noticed.

STURSBURG

Thus, this manoeuvre of walking out of a conference or a meeting would seem to have only a negative effect. Certainly, the withdrawal of the South African delegation from the Assembly has not changed a resolution by a single comma, nor altered the attitude of the United Nations on any issue.

Actually, it can be a dangerous practice for it shows up in a harsh and brutal manner the real importance of a country, and, unhappily, it has emphasized what was already well known, that the French are not the great power they used to be. If the Americans or the Russians, or even the British or the Indians, had quit the Assembly, it would have been a great deal more difficult to have carried on here.

The absence of the United States would make it impossible to discuss almost anything here, and the absence of the Soviet Union would make such debates pretty useless. Certainly, we could do nothing about the peaceful uses of atomic energy, not to mention disarmament, without the presence of these two great powers.

HUMBLING EFFECT

As one diplomat has said: no country, except possibly a Great Power, is absolutely indispensable in this organization, and sometimes even a Great Power is not so indispensable. That should have a humbling effect and should prevent such self-defeating moves as walking out of debates and withdrawing from Assemblies.

When all is said and done, the French are not really needed on the Canadian proposal for the simultaneous admission of 18 new members in the Assembly, from which they withdrew; they are only needed in the Security Council, from which they did not withdraw.

The trouble with membership is that it has to pass through two processes here: the Security Council must recommend a country for admission to the United Nations, and, after that, the Assembly must pass on that recommendation, although there is nothing to stop it from making known its wishes first.

As one of the permanent members of the Security Council, the French have a veto. Although they have never said that they would use it against any country in the Canadian package deal, they have said that they could not come to any agreement on this matter as long as they were outside the Assembly.

It was hardly a gentle hint but it was heeded here. After long and difficult negotiations, Krishna Menon of India, was able to persuade the Arabs to agree to his formula for removing the agenda Algerian item from the Assembly's agenda and thus allow the French delegation to return.

There were several arguments which the Indian delegate used, and, despite his crochety manner, he is a most persuasive negotiator, especially among his own Asian and African people, but the Canadians, and almost everyone else, are agreed that his most telling argument was membership—our move to open the doors of the United Nations and make it a more representative organization.

Mr. Menon was able to say to the Arabs, in so many words, that the return of the French to the Assembly was fair exchange for the admittance of 18 new members which would greatly strengthen the anti-colonial forces in the United Nations. Thus, he could suggest that if they dropped the Algerian issue now, they would be in a better position to raise it later, if they wanted to do so.

LONDON LETTER

By WALLACE REYBURN

Breezy and Slick TV

LONDON—The British are out of prison. They are no longer chained to the monopoly of the BBC. And as I watched with groups of them the first commercial programs ever to be put out over the air in Britain they were certainly like a bunch of just-released prisoners savoring the delights and excitement of being out in the big wide world.

The coming of commercial television is a matter of great national importance. For 30 years—in fact from the very beginnings of radio for the public—folks here have been fed over the ether by an organization dedicated not to pleasing the people but to pleasing themselves.

Overnight, as if by magic, the British are now getting programs from outfits bending over backwards to give them what they want. Where the BBC was pompous, ponderous and "significant," the commercial boys are bright, breezy and slick. And the British love it.

It is so interesting to see all those arguments the British used to put up against commercial radio and TV go by the board. One can see now that, stuck with the BBC, they had to voice some sort of defence of the system, since it was British and it would have been a bit unpatriotic to admit to outsiders (especially Americans) that it was shocking.

My special interest in my first view of ITV (the public seems to have decided that an abbreviation of Independent TV is what they'll call this new thing) was to see how the commercials would be handled. With typical British restraint, they don't intrude. They are inserted like a page of advertising in a magazine, i.e., unrelated to the reading matter. Minute and half-minute "spots" are dropped in between programs and between rounds of boxing, vaudeville turns, etc.

It is not sponsored television, in the North American sense. By the terms of the government charter, advertisers cannot directly sponsor programs, can merely take air time divorced from the subject matter of the programs. Advertisers are not even allowed to repeatedly have their spot before a certain program in order to become identified with it.

Judging on what I've seen so far, this seems a fine system. You get your television news, features, entertainment or whatever it happens to be straight—with an inoffensive sprinkling of advertisements.

Most noticeable difference between this new TV and the BBC stuff is the handling of news. The News Editor came onto the screen to make an oblique crack at the BBC's news approach. He said they won't handle only "significant" news—about international conferences, the housing situation, political developments, etc.—they'll give human interest news as well.

Basilio to Quit 'In a Few Months'

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—Welterweight champion Carmen Basilio was quoted Friday as saying he plans to retire in "a few months."

Basilio was interviewed when he arrived in Syracuse from Boston, where he stopped challenger Tony DeMarco in the 12th round of a title fight Wednesday night.

Dick Grossman, of station WHEN-TV, quoted 29-year-old Basilio as saying: "Frankly, I'm considering retiring in a few months. This is pretty rugged business you know and I'm getting a little older."

NEW INVALID PILLOW GAVE IKE NEEDED REST

DES MOINES, Ia. (UP)—Leslie C. Myers received a "thank you" letter from Mrs. Eisenhower for sending President Eisenhower a special pillow he devised for persons confined to bed.

Myers, who suffered a heart attack in 1950, designed the horseshoe-shaped head rest with several pillows during his illness. It eased the stiffness in his neck, and the ends, extending down the upper half of his body, gave him arm rests to relieve elbow soreness.

B.C. Jobs Available For 185 Engineers

Vacancies for professional engineers in British Columbia have increased from 25 to 185 during the past year, the B.C. Association of Professional Engineers was told here today.

D. W. Russell, P.Eng., speaking at the association's convention in the Empress Hotel, said the 185 vacancies now listed in B.C. were for 44 civil and structural engineers, 21 mechanical, 12 electric, eight geological, mining and metallurgical, 14 miscellaneous classifications and 12 sub-professional, including draughtsmen.

Mr. Russell, who was reporting for the association's professional placement service, said 29 professional engineers are now seeking posts in B.C., of whom four are civil and structural, eight are electrical, 13 mechanical, three chemical and one metallurgical.

SEEK NEW JOBS

"Of that 29," he added, "only one or two are temporarily unemployed. The rest have employment but are looking for new posts."

"This is in contrast to last year when 108 professional engineers were seeking posts and a third of them were actually unemployed. It shows how much the demand for professional engineers has increased in B.C. during the past 12 months."

He added that every ship from Australia brings professional engineers to the province and they are quickly absorbed into industry.

Dr. H. C. Gunning of the University of British Columbia, speaking as president of the Association, said one effect of the shortage is that private industry is taking professional engineers from the universities.

"There is a danger that if this goes on we may kill the goose that lays the golden egg," he said.

PAYS ITS WAY

Prof. L. G. R. Crouch, reporting for the editorial board, revealed that its publication, The B.C. Professional Engineer, is now paying its way and is no longer subsidized by the association.

J. A. Merchant, Vancouver, registrar of the association, revealed that salaries paid to professional engineers in B.C. are lower than in any other province in Canada.

British Press Hurls Criticism At Red Leaders Over India Tour

(From AP, UP)

LONDON—Nikolai Bulganin and Nikita Khrushchev may have been winning friends in Asia but their visit to India has cost them a loss of dignity in many British eyes.

The visit of Premier Bulganin and party chief Khrushchev to London, planned for the spring, already is the subject of biting newspaper humor. A cartoon in The Daily Mail showed a pudgy Khrushchev addressing a stuffy formal banquet in London's ancient Guildhall. The Communist boss begins: Comrade lord mayor, reactionary lords, ladies and imperialist fascist warmongers. Bulganin and a guest resembling Dr. Hewlett Johnson, the "Red" Dean of Canterbury, look pleased.

Historian Alan Taylor, a columnist in The Daily Herald, referred to the Russians as "the two knockabout comedians who have just been touring India."

Taylor deplored the suggestion it would be better if Bulganin and Khrushchev did not come to London in view of their attacks on the West before Indian audiences.

"On the contrary," Taylor wrote, "I can hardly wait to hear some new pearls of their wisdom."

A semi-official organ of the Church of England said it strongly opposed the scheduled visit.

Steel Offered For Sale Here By Chile Firm

Plans to ship about 10,000 tons of steel plate to West Coast utilities next year at a cost of "between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000" were announced here Friday by Manuel Agosin, vice-president in charge of sales, Compania De Acero Del Pacifico, Santiago, Chile.

All transactions would be made in dollars, at world prices. He met here with officials of both Yarrow's Ltd. and Victoria Machinery Depot Co. Ltd., local heavy users of steel plate in both shipbuilding and industrial work.

No domestic plate is available, the Victoria men agreed, except on a small quota basis, and twice the available plate quantity could be used in city shipyards alone.

"We believe we can establish a steady business with this area," said Mr. Agosin, pointing out that steel plate was in heavy, constant demand everywhere in the world.

"It can be sold anywhere, at any amount. In fact I could sell it sitting at my desk in Santiago." But, he went on, his visit here was to build a steady business for the years to come.

SHIPS TO ENGLAND

At present CAP sells the majority of South American countries, and this year made shipments to England.

Plate transportation posed little problem, he said, as the Chilean North Pacific Line touched on the West Coast here every couple of weeks. Freight rates, he said, were the same between Chile and Panama as between Chile and here, about 8,000 miles.

Capacity of CAP's mill at Concepcion was 400,000 tons of ingots yearly. Among steel goods produced were plate, tinplate, cold roll sheets, galvanized wire, bars and sheets.

Profit in 1954 on the $100,000,000 operation totalled $4,200,000.

Reason for having surplus production available for export lay in the fact the company "must have a production capacity in excess of the country's immediate requirements," he said.

Mr. Agosin, who was here one day only after four days in Vancouver, said his visit would be a regular one to follow through on preliminary market studies.

Women Reluctant To Act on Juries In New Zealand

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP)—A New Zealand judge drew attention to the fact that Auckland, a city of nearly 400,000, had only six women on its jury roll, although any woman between 25 and 60 was eligible to serve. Women protested that they did not know they had to apply for enrolment, unlike men who go on the roll automatically. Two weeks later one more woman had applied.

Only a Penny But It's All Theirs

INVERCARGILL, N.Z. (CP)—The Southland branch of the New Zealand Society of Accountants knows how to keep on the right side of the ledger.

In fact it has the operation down to a fine art. Its annual balance sheet recorded that the year ended with a balance at the bank of one penny.

SERIES BY HIS VALET

Hitler's Private Life

'I am still alive', Fuehrer phoned Berlin when bombing failed; 'Obey my orders only.' Then heads began to fall

By HEINZ LINGE, Hitler's Personal Valet

(World Copyright, 1955)

Hitler realized the Stauffenberg bomb plot had been conceived in Berlin and he ordered an urgent call to be put through to Goebbels, but it was three hours before communications were re-established with Berlin.

While this was going on the driver who had taken von Stauffenberg to the airport was questioned, and he said he noticed that the colonel threw a parcel from the car on the way to the airport. The parcel was found and in it were more explosives.

It was exactly 4.30 p.m. when the operator said that communication had been resumed. I called Hitler, who, despite his injuries, almost ran to the telephone in his anxiety. In a very loud voice and very excited, he asked what was happening in Berlin.

Goebbels told Hitler that he had with him Major Rehmer who was in charge of the Berlin security forces. Rehmer had come to him, Goebbels said, bewildered after receiving orders to march his troops up to all the ministries around the Reich chancellery and to seize them.

"OBEY MY ORDERS" Hitler asked that Rehmer be put on the line, then I heard Hitler say:

"Major Rehmer, an attempt has been made to kill me but I am alive. My orders, and only my orders are to be obeyed. My orders to you are that I make you responsible for Berlin. You will take steps to secure Berlin for me. You have my order to use such force as you may think necessary, and to shoot anyone who may attempt to disobey the orders I have given you. You will be promoted immediately to the rank of colonel."

Rehmer said he would carry out the orders.

There followed a long discussion with Goebbels, at the end of which Goebbels was asked to make arrangements for Hitler to speak over the radio to the nation.

At midnight, Hitler addressed the German people. He told them what had happened. He said he was very much alive, but the fact that the generals on each side of him had been killed was a sure sign of his future destiny.

SERVICES FAITHFUL

Hitler was followed on the air by Keitel, representing the army, and Goering representing the navy, and Goering representing the air force, to let everyone know that the three services were completely behind Hitler.

Bit by bit, news of von Stauffenberg's flight from Rastenburg, his arrival in Berlin and his reception by General Fromm reached Hitler.

Immediately von Stauffenberg landed in Berlin, about 4 p.m., he telephoned General Fromm to say, "Der Fuehrer ist tot." On receipt of this message, Major Rehmer was given orders to secure Berlin.

Van Stauffenberg then went about some business of his own and it was not until 5 p.m. or later that he reported at General Fromm's headquarters in Bendlerstrasse, where he was immediately arrested with two other officers. On General Fromm's orders, he was taken into the back yard and shot at once.

Although a subsequent died in Munich, and have lived in Rastenburg when two generals at my side were killed. It is clearer than ever that the destiny of the German Reich lies in my hands and that this has long been decided by fate."

People's Court failed to convict General Fromm of complicity in the plot, it did not change Hitler's mind.

"Stauffenberg was shot," said Hitler, "to destroy direct evidence against General Fromm himself."

FROM THE CULPRIT

In the following year, Fromm was shot on Hitler's direct orders. I can't remember now the official reason for the shooting, but the real reason was that Fromm was the general who sent Von Stauffenberg to Rastenburg.

Feggelein, Eva Braun's brother-in-law who was later shot, arrived some time later bringing two thick books which Himmler said had been found in a safe in the headquarters of Admiral Canaris, head of espionage service at Zossen near Berlin.

I read the books myself some time later. They purported to be accounts of plots which had been hatched ever since 1939 to get rid of Hitler.

Hitler gave the impression that he was highly amused at the contents of the two books but left it to Himmler and the Gestapo and the S.S. to deal with it.

"Linge," he said to me, "I have been saved when comrades wrapped. Standard 42", each.

U.K.'s Ravaged East Coast Safe Behind Big, New Dikes

LONDON (Reuters)—People living on the east coast of Britain are facing the winter-season with confidence, knowing that the disastrous floods of January and February, 1953, are unlikely to be repeated.

In the 21 months since 300 died as a result of severe flooding at a time when high spring tides and heavy gales ravaged extensive areas from the Humber to Kent, more than £27,500,000 has been spent on repairing, restoring and improving embankments, dikes and sea-walls.

Most of the improvements have been completed, though at one or two places work is not expected to finish until the end of this year or early 1956. But everywhere there is confidence that whatever the winter has in store, the east coast is more than ready for it.

At Felixstowe, where 28 persons died and 700 houses were damaged, the borough surveyor said that the new defences are finished, apart from one short stretch of sea-wall. "If we get no worse than 1953," he added, "and it would be difficult to imagine that we could, then we are confident there will be no serious effects."

The Essex river board, whose domain includes the north bank of the Thames estuary, has increased the height of sea-walls by an average of two feet, reinforced some of them with steel piles, and increased parapets on others.

Motor Barges Oust Ancient Nile Feluccas

CAIRO (Reuters)—Nile feluccas, the flat-bottomed boats whose large, pointed lateen sails have since the time of the pharaohs been a part of the Egyptian scene, are gradually disappearing.

They are being replaced by motor barges, which carry cotton bales, coal and iron ore along the inland waterway.

Some 15,000 feluccas still ply up and down the long, winding course of the Nile, moving majestically downstream from Aswan to Alexandria against the background of the pyramids and other relics of antiquity.

Gen. De Gaulle Tells Of Crucial War Years

PARIS (NEA)—Almost 10 years ago Gen. Charles de Gaulle abandoned his job as head of the French government to retire to his estate at Colombey-les-deux-Eglises, 200 miles east of Paris.

His contention that there was something basically wrong with France's political system has since then been amply justified. In the last nine years 15 premiers have formed 20 Cabinets. Two hundred deputies have become ministers of state. Even his Rassemblement du Peuple Français (French People's Rally), a movement which he headed after he left the government and with which he hoped to gain a majority in parliament, has been dissolved.

Although at one time it represented the strongest single group in the National Assembly, RPF subsequently split up into two factions (neither of which de Gaulle recognized) on the question of whether its leaders should accept Cabinet posts. This was the beginning of the end of the RPF. Then France lost Indo-China and right now the authority of the French Union is menaced in North Africa.

But retirement does not mean inaction for the man who during four long years was the very symbol of the Resistance Movement to patriots in occupied France and heralded as a saviour when she was liberated. He has never failed to follow national and international events with the greatest vigilance.

PLANS THIRD VOLUME

Last year he published the first volume of his memoirs. He is now busy putting the finishing touches to the second volume, "Unite," which is to appear in March, 1956, and covers the years 1942-1944. The third volume will go from 1944 to the end of his premiership in 1946. Until the English translation of the first volume, "Call to Honor," few people abroad knew that de Gaulle is probably the most distinguished political writer France has produced during the Third and Fourth Republics.

Contrary to most autobiographers, de Gaulle never took a note during the four years he spent in England or when he was at the head of the government. His memoirs which cover the history of France from before her downfall right on through to 1946, are written from memory, supported by an enormous mass of letters, memos and telegrams.

DAUGHTER TYPES MS De Gaulle is a methodical worker and writes three drafts of each chapter—by hand. The final one is then typed out by his daughter, Elizabeth. He and his wife live very much like hermits at Colombey, and almost as frugally. The house is a large rambling manor full of souvenirs of the war, surrounded by a vast park and encircled by a forest. Visitors are rare. Only his son Philippe and daughter Elizabeth, with their three children, plus a handful of close relatives penetrate beyond the wall of their private life.

Madame de Gaulle is invariably at the general's side. She has never left it. She accompanies him to Paris on his weekly visits to his old headquarters in the Rue de Solferino, a stone's throw from the National Assembly. Here a half-score of devoted Gaullists attend to the general's business, keeping him posted on all things of interest to him.

At Colombey, de Gaulle usually spends his mornings at his desk. After lunch he and his wife are usually driven to the nearby forest where they take a long walk. When time presses, he walks in the vast park where a gigantic cross of Lorraine grows in flowers. Often his steps will lead him through the little village up to the cemetery where his favorite daughter, Anne, lies buried.

CONFESSES FAILURE

Will de Gaulle ever return to power? Recently the ex-president of the Rally of the French People is reported to have told a visitor: "France will go through more ups and downs, but the fact remains that our country, since the beginning of the century, is on the down grade. She had an excellent chance, at Liberation to stem the tide. It was here I failed. I could not force the hand of the people."

The magic current which once ran between de Gaulle and his beloved France is interrupted. He is aware of this as he is of the fact that only the thunder of tremendous events can bring him back to the pilot's helm.

So the greatest lover France ever had waits for the messenger who will come—if and when the hour of another drama should strike again. Only then will he abandon the pen for the sword.

CALLED INSENSITIVE

De Gaulle is said to have few intimate friends, mainly due to his extreme reserve which so many people judge as lack of sensitivity. Deep down he is a most sensitive man, but cannot find the voice to express his feelings even when most profoundly moved.

There was a day when Rennes was liberated and a great clamor rose from the crowd who had waited to see the man who had helped to maintain their courage during so many years. Deathly pale, his voice choked with emotion, all he could do was intone, offkey, the Marcellaise. His enemies have often in the past and even now charged him with dictatorial ambitions. General de Gaulle invariably retorts that he had several opportunities to become a dictator after France was liberated and refused them.

When he abandoned politics he quit without rank or position. People close to him say their leader's greatest nostalgia is that of no longer being able directly to serve his country.

Daring Young Man Pulls No Punches

By JAMES SCOTT

Roger Lemelin, is not exactly the enfant terrible of Quebec writers (his achievement is too solid for that) but, starting with his first novel, "The Town Below," he has pretty consistently managed to provoke a nervous ripple along the backs of those who belong to the most rigid, clerical group.

The theme of his latest novel, now translated under the title, "In Search of Splendour," is not going to make a lot of Canadians feel much easier. To suggest, let alone delineate the temptations of a young man who thinks his vacation is the priesthood only to change his mind on the day of his graduation from the Grand Seminary, is dangerous ground for a Quebecois.

Mr. Lemelin is a writer who almost seems to glory in taking such risks with his compatriots and, so far, most of them seem to like it. In this book, he not only, with respect but pulling no punches, lays bare what he considers to be weaknesses in the attitude of the Quebec clergy, but he also lays into the snobbery of monied society in Quebec City and rips into the alleged corruption of the provincial government.

Harsh Reality Crumples Confidence

The thing which earns my respect in this performance is that the author does not let his book become merely a hot-tempered attack on these things.

They are all considered, but the focal point remains the hero himself—a young, volatile Pierre, a strong, handsome and intelligent lad who is impatient with the whole world. What this story is really about is youth's discovery that the hard, cruel world is really just that.

Pierre left the Seminary confident in his own powers; he had not been graduated more than a few hours than an unlucky accident weakened his confidence and from that moment on, both while he was in retreat working in a lumber camp and when he returned to Quebec City, the world buffeted him about—as the world always does—until he realized that the strength of youth, is by no means enough and that the only strength which counts is that which a man, facing up to the challenge of his environment, is able to build within himself. Then, and only then, was Pierre able to solve the problem of his vocation.

This is a powerful and readable book, told with great narrative flair which, at times almost leads it into the melodramatic. Sometimes Mr. Lemelin was led right to the brink of unbelief in his people and situations, but he always drew back in time.

Whether this was good management or good luck, I'm not sure, but so far it has worked and "In Search of Splendour" has come out one of the best Canadian novels of the year.

Title a Joke But Record Impressive

"Thriller the Brindled Cat Hath Mew'd" is the somewhat contrived title of the third book about the Stratford Shakespearean Festival. It came about as a joke (the title that is) according to Robertson Davies who writes the preface, and that's just as well. This search for a title with the proper number in it may easily lead to absurdity.

On the whole, this is a first-class record of the third season of what has become Canada's No. 1 theatre. The criticisms of Robertson Davies are much the best and sensible he has yet written about Stratford.

Missing were pictures of the actors. In former years they were done by Grant Macdonald; this year, sketches by Tanya Moiseiwitsch for the costumes take their place. Especially for people who were not able to see any of the productions, this is a definite lack in this year's book.

Miss Moiseiwitsch and Dr. Tyrone Guthrie collaborate in a piece explaining the actual production of Oedipus. For anyone interested in the technique of the theatre, this is excellent reading although it still did not convince me that the festival was justified in running the Oedipus production two years in a row. Dr. Boyd Neel rounds off the bouquet with some comments about the music which was included for the first time in the festival program this year.

All together this is a handsome volume, worthy companion (except for the illustrations) of the two previous volumes and a valuable record of what undoubtedly is one of this country's major artistic achievements.

Boredom Theme Of Boring Tale

THE DEER PARK, by Norman Mailer. Published by Putnam.

Norman Mailer, author of "The Naked and the Dead," has turned out a novel featuring life in a movie colony in southern California. Desert D'O is a resort in the desert where movie-land characters come for relaxation—uninhibited drinking, love-making, wife-swapping, etc. Into this enervating atmosphere comes air force veteran Sergius O'Shaughnessy with a wad of dough he won in a poker game in Tokyo.

He got acquainted with Dorothea O'Faye, an old show girl, who held court in her home, The Hangover, with a group of hangers-on including Charles Eitel, a famous director whose career had allegedly been short-circuited by his testimony (or lack of it) before a congressional committee; the near-beauty Elena who was in love with Eitel; Lulu, the self-adoring starlet who seemed to love Sergius; and other minor and unlikely characters. The theme of the story seems to be that drunken sex masquerading as love in the midst of too much money and general boredom can be quite uninteresting. That the setting is a movie colony is not important and neither is the novel.

Macmillan has ordered a second printing of Mason Wade's authoritative 1,100-page study, "The French Canadians, 1760-1945," and expects that it will be available in January.

BAGS "DUCK STAMP" PRIZE—This water color sketch of a pair of American mergansers skimming low over fog-bound water has been chosen as the design for the 1956-57 federal duck stamp. Selected out of 64 designs by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, it was submitted by Edward J. Bierly of Arlington, Va. Bierly is with the Army camouflage staff at Fort Belvoir, Va.

THE STAMP CORNER

By REG NAIENE

The new 1956 editions of the stamp catalogues have all now made their appearance, and it is interesting to compare the new prices with the last year's quotations.

Taking a look first at our own British Columbia stamps of the colonial period, a number of changes are noted. (Prices in brackets are last year's values). 1861 2½d, $25 unused ($22.50) Vancouver Island 5c red, $20 unused, $17.50 used ($17.50) 1871 10c blue, ditto; B.C. 3d blue, $7 used or unused ($4, $5); 2c brown, ditto. Six other B.C. stamps show increases of from 15 to 25 per cent, so it is evident that the supply is not keeping up with the demand.

As far as local holdings go, old B.C. stamps in the hands of pioneer families have been cleaned out long ago. It is doubtful if even a single specimen has turned up from an original source during the last 12 months. This condition is general throughout the world, of course. Practically all the rarities coming on the market have well-known pedigrees, and when they come up for auction are generally described as "ex Jones collection" or whoever the owner happens to be. For this reason the 19th century issues, which for years have been pretty well static, are beginning to move upwards in quite a noticeable manner.

Canada seems to be an exception this year, as few changes have been made. No. 1 in the catalogue, the 3d beaver on laid paper, goes from $40 to $45, the three shades of the 10c Albert of 1859 add a dollar or two, and the dollar values of the 1897 Jubilee move up a little as usual, but otherwise there is little worth noting.

Story Recalls Early Days Of Barbary Coast Shipping

"Chronicle of the Calypso Clipper," by John Jennings, Little, Brown & Co., Toronto, 293 pages, $4.50.

In John Jennings' seventh book, "Chronicle of the Calypso," he tells another romantic story of the sea.

It opens in New York Harbor in 1856 when a worldly-wise woman promoter decides to move her establishment—girls and all—to San Francisco, where gold flows more freely, especially along the Barbary Coast. Placing too much emphasis on that point, however, does not present a real view of the story. Suspense is sustained throughout the whole book by a race at sea following a heavy belt placed by a young captain, taunted by

FINE WRITING ENHANCES TALES

A PIECE OF LUCK by Frances Gray Patton, Dodd, Mead Co., Toronto, 125 pages, $3.50. Frances Gray Patton, whose first collection of stories was enthusiastically received, has added to her laurels as a writer by her newest book, "A Piece of Luck."

It consists of thirteen short pieces, some of which are short stories and others incidents. All are lifted to a high plane by the writer's gift of description, her deep insight into human nature, and a tartly flavored humor which keeps the reader chuckling. It is a book that will have a special appeal to those who enjoy fine writing.

Publishers Enter Juvenile Field

Prentice-Hall is establishing a new juvenile book department, and a line of books for younger readers will soon be launched. Miss Marjorie Thayer will join Prentice-Hall on Nov. 7th as juvenile editor.

Miss Thayer has been at Alfred A. Knopf since March 1951 where she was promotion director of books for children and young people. Prior to that time for four years she was editor of the New Home Library line of books at Doubleday & Co., and was also editor of the career series of books at Funk and Wagnalls from 1939 to 1943.

Reviewing the Records

By DELOS SMITH
NEW YORK (UP)—You will wonder what on earth the world is coming to when you listen to a potpourri record ranging from Bach to Berlin. It won't be the repertoire but the instruments—or, rather instrument.

It sounds first like a harpsichord, then a small classical orchestra, then an organ, then a hill-billy band, then a piano, then a dance band. But what is playing all the time is a "music synthesizer"—and the "musicians" are a couple of electronic engineers.

This is a startling development of the David Sarnoff Research Laboratory which has unveiled many scientific wonders but none with the implications for music and musicians as this one. The implication is that with electronics, engineers can sound the characteristic tonal qualities of any instrument or group of instruments.

Some top musicians have been to the laboratory to see if they could tell the difference between synthesized music and the same music made by musicians playing musical instruments. They couldn't and it's doubtful if anyone will be able to tell by comparing this recording with any other recording which used instruments rather than electronics (RCA Victor).

For hi-fi fans—"Flamenco," an album of flamenco guitar solos by Mario Escudero (Folkways). These were recorded by Moses Asch, who journeys with his equipment to any spot where he can find unusual music.

Peggy Packard finishes a portrait.

'I NEVER MADE UP MY MIND'

Choice of Careers for Talented Victoria Girl

By AUDREY S.T.D. JOHNSON
Somewhere along in her mid-teens, Peggy Walton (Packard) was faced with two important alternatives. It was a choice comparatively few people are called upon to make.

For her developing talents were indicative to her teachers and others qualified to judge, that the blonde, attractive girl had at her command two potential careers.

Unable to decide between music and art, Peggy pursued training in both talents. And her teachers—the late Madame Eva Baird for voice and Ina D. D. Uthoff for art—were equally enthusiastic over the promise of their pupil.

"But," says Peggy, "I never could make up my mind which one to choose. Today, still youthful and possessed of abundant vital energy for all forms of artistic endeavor, she continues to divide her attention between music—she is possessor of an extraordinarily rich and beautiful soprano voice—and the teaching and practice of portraiture, sculpture and other forms of art.

SESSIONS IN U.S.
A cleavage of time and concentration that probably is alone responsible for the fact that she does not as yet occupy an important place in the international scene.

Peggy spent two long sessions in Philadelphia and New York where she studied voice with Madame Freschl and art at the Pennsylvania Academy of Fine Arts.

Her vocal coach in the East was Milton Rich, now conductor of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra, and this past summer, guest conductor with the Vancouver Symphony.

Peggy has a studio on Lansdowne Road, The Barn, in the grounds of the old Walton home on the corner of Richmond Road. Here, too, she keeps house and brings up her young son and daughter, Wendy and Christopher Robin.

She finds life a full and stimulating proposition as she pursues her dual path. Modest and unassuming, possessed by the true artistic temperament with its soaring idealism and its areas of discouragement, Peggy has few regrets because she did not define her energies into the single channel so often advocated by the many who have heaped praise on her work in both genres.

"Practicing one art provides a stimulation for the other," is the way she feels about it.

CERTIFIED TEACHER
So she teaches at the Norfolk Galleries. A couple of years ago she completed teacher training at the Provincial Normal School and is certificated to teach art in the public schools of the province but so far she has found no time for this.

She paints portraits on commission, in both oil and pastel. She enjoys active participation in creative work with Victoria Theatre Guild. And she sings whenever the spirit moves her or when a worthwhile experience beckons.

Such a one was the invitation to sing the soprano part in Victoria Choral Society's "Messiah" at the Royal Theatre, December 12.

This full scale production, with Victoria Symphony Orchestra and Graham Steed conducting. Is something she is looking forward to with keen anticipation.

Like most creative artists, what matters to Peggy Packard is the thing she is doing at the moment—and there is always a new moment with all its attendant excitements and despair on the next swing of the pendulum.

CONDUCTOR LISTS DON'TS FOR MUSIC AUDITORIUMS

SYDNEY (CP)—The conductor of the Sydney Symphony Orchestra, Sir Eugene Goossens, has some advice for architects on how to design opera houses. Speaking at a luncheon of the Royal Australian Institute of Architects, he gave the following list of "don'ts":

"Don't build a round hall. They're a horror to us. The sound rebounds everywhere."

"Don't build a stage with no ceiling, or with cloth hangings. They eat up the sound and the audience gets half what it pays for."

"Don't have thick carpets or thickly upholstered seats. You must have resonant surfaces."

"Don't obstruct the audience's view of the stage. Musicians can sense audience irritation."

The New South Wales government plans to build Sydney's first opera house on the shores of Sydney Harbor. It has started an international competition for a suitable design.

Symphonic Hosts--Beethoven and Buns!

Glenn Gould in 'Emperor' Concerto
Feature of Festive Concert Pair

By HANS GRUBER
Conductor Victoria Symphony Orchestra

Do you like parties? You do? Then come to the Royal tomorrow afternoon at 3 or Monday evening at 8.30. Both entire audiences are invited to have some coffee and cake with all of us of the orchestra following both performances—ah, yes, incidentally, there WILL be performances preceding the parties, the musical part of the Sunday afternoon and Monday evening consisting of compositions by Brahms, Aaron Copland, and Beethoven.

The latter is represented by his "Emperor" Concerto, for piano and orchestra, with Glenn Gould as soloist, whose playing of this concerto should really on no account be missed, party or no.

But back to this party business. Of all the varied and manifold things a musician is confronted with in the course of his career, catering for some 2,000 people is as yet beyond any previous experience.

MUSIC OFF—COFFEE ON!

But don't be frightened. You won't depend entirely on your skills as mass-hosts. The instant the last note of God Save the Queen will have died away, a highly organized army of volunteers will completely clear the stage of all musical impedimenta—live and inanimate—in a matter of two or three minutes.

And no sooner will that be done, than long tables ready to feed you will meet you personally after no more time than it will take you to walk (though not too fast, please) from your seat on to the stage.

Perhaps you are wondering where we get the money for so huge a party. Well, a number of firms and organizations have provided all catering material and facilities—but only on condition that they remain anonymous. So, no more on that score.

If you think that this is all that is in store for you tomorrow afternoon and Monday night, you are mistaken—at least I hope you are.

You see, I have written a letter to Santa Claus, asking him to come in person to the concert and bring you a present. Even he, however, cannot have a large enough clerical staff to answer all his correspondence—in short, I have no definite indication that he will act upon my letter—but let us see what will happen.

However, I cannot help harboring a wishful hope that you will come also to hear the music, inasmuch as we have worked no less hard on it than we have in connection with the party and with Santa Claus!

OFFICIAL CONCERN OVER LOSS OF ART TREASURES

LONDON (Reuters).—Britain, once a vast storehouse of art treasures, is being drained of its top-flight possessions, a government committee complained Thursday. Foreign buyers, many of them Americans, are making "a very considerable drain on Britain's art resources," the reviewing committee on the export of works of art declared in a published report. The committee said that during the 12 months up to last July, 196 master paintings valued at $1,058,480 had left the United Kingdom.

TV Sparks Comeback Of Disney's Mickey

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP).—The comeback star of the year is a 27-year-old one-time has-been named Mickey Mouse.

The shy rodent has captured a new generation, this time as host of the weekday ABC television hour, "The Mickey Mouse Club." Mickey never had it so good. His outsize ears are popping up on the heads of kids all over the land; they're buying the mouse hats (29 to 98 cents) at the rate of 24,000 a day. (Whatever happened to coonskins?). Two hundred other pieces of merchandise connected with the club are being sold, and more are added daily.

The mouse has captured daytime rating honors, snowing under his major opponents, veterans Howdy Doody and Pinky Lee. A recent survey gave the club a 76-per-cent advantage over the opposition in the eastern United States.

FOR AND AGAINST

Judging from the reaction of Walt Disney's studio, parents have mixed feelings about the show:

1. They are delighted to have a show that doesn't insult their children's intelligence.

2. They are appalled by the amount of commercials.

As one of the captive audience—our TV set is monopolized from 5 to 5 each weekday—I agree. The show is both entertaining and enlightening, done with as much taste and care as any adult program.

But the commercials! They're enough to drive you nuts. Not only are there three in every 15 minutes, the station also sneaks in three more every 15 minutes at the station break.

The Disney people are just as upset as the public. Walt apparently didn't foresee the excesses of the network; he vows that next year he'll have some control over such matters.

ABC has bragged that Mickey Mouse has brought in $15,000,000 from sponsors. The figures haven't been released, but it's rumored that Disney gets little more than a tenth of this to produce the films.

The studio continues to pour money into the series to maintain quality. The most successful part of the program appears to be the third quarter-hour. It has featured

Victoria Leads In Orchestral Tributes

Victoria Symphony Orchestra is in fine company according to a recent comment from New York. It will be remembered that Hans Gruber programmed both Sibelius and Mozart works on the first program this season, with the purpose of honoring respective anniversaries of the two composers. In fact, the Victoria orchestra might even be said to have an edge on most of its American confreres.

According to the New York release: "With all the hullabaloo about next year being the 200th anniversary of the birth of Mozart, not too much has been said in the musical world about December 8 being the 90th birthday of the living Jan Sibelius.

"However, the Philadelphia orchestra began honoring the great Finn on Oct. 14 and 15 with the first of a series of Sibelius concerts.

Show time: "Movie Pop Parade," seven show numbers recorded by M-G-M stars. Includes: "The Girl Upstairs" from "The Seven Year Itch" by Billy Fields and "La La Lu" from "Lady and the Tramp" by Kay Armen.

DEMILLE'S 'TEN COMMANDMENTS'

Filmed in 112 Days Editing Takes Year

By HENRY GRIS

United Press Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UP).—Cecil B. DeMille's super-colossal "The Ten Commandments" was completed August 13 in Hollywood after something like 112 shooting days. Yet, the picture won't be shown before the fall of 1956. Why?

The answer is simple. It will take DeMille just that long, a full year, to knock an astronomical 750,000 feet of celluloid into the shape of the monumental film he envisages.

The Paramount picture, which cost about $10,000,000, will run three and a half hours on the screen. It will have no counterpart in movie history since the biggest of them all, "Gone With the Wind," represented a lesser effort in time, manpower and money.

DeMille now puts in a six-day week in a projection room. Surrounded by his aides, headed by his faithful right-hand man, actor-director Henry Wilcoxon, he edits the film along with his long-time associate, Miss Anne Bauchens, Hollywood's legendary woman film editor who has edited 66 of DeMille's 70 films.

Miss Bauchens has been cutting "The Ten Commandments" ever since the first feet of color film returned from the film laboratory. It's a slow grind, though, as one of his aides explained.

"Mr. DeMille," he said, "approves not just every foot, but every inch and every particle of the completed film."

The projection room sessions are expected to continue into the spring of 1956 with a minimum of four and a half months earmarked for the operation. Meanwhile, composer Elmer Bernstein, already has begun preliminary consultations on scoring. He consults with DeMille, who has full charge of this operation as well.

However, the scoring can't begin in earnest until completed sequences have been translated into graphs with every mood and motion estimated in split seconds, so the composer may write his music to fit the time frame.

Also, he will have to subordinate it to the dialogue and any sound effects DeMille will have

New President For St. Luke's Players

At a recent meeting of St. Luke's Players, Cmdr. H. E. Lukey was elected president. He succeeds Mr. S. Brooker who had been acting president.

Scheduled activities include plans for the Children's Theatre which will be directed by Robin Terry, well-known for his fine abilities as an actor and director.

Mrs. Flora Nicholson, producer-director of St. Luke's Players since its start eight years ago, will direct a three-act drama, during the coming season.

It was also decided to hold some evening sessions of play reading, commencing shortly.

Other matters referred to included the South Vancouver Island Drama Festival in the spring and the intention of the group to enter.

Anyone wishing to join St. Luke's Players is heartily invited to communicate with the secretary, Mrs. M. Carson, 3110 Frenchette street.

Where There's a Will

Weak eyesight is no handicap to the stage performer, who has to learn his part beforehand in any case, but it is a great trial to the radio artist who must read from a script in the studio under artificial light. Dave Morris, a North Country comedian who has his own BBC Variety series, has such poor eyesight that he cannot read from a script but gets over the difficulty by learning the whole show by heart before transmission. Should any other member of the cast lose his place in the script, Morris can always step into the breach with the right line.

Franz Liszt and His Circle will be the topic of another lecture-recital in the series being presented by West Coast pianist, Lloyd Powell at the Art Gallery.

Mr. Powell, in discussing the colorful personality of the pianist-composer and the brilliant men and women who surround him, will illustrate his talk at the piano.

OFF THE RECORD—LESS IMPRESSIVE

Two youngish European pianists who have made deep impressions on Americans who listen closely to phonograph records, impressed the critics but not as deeply when they made their American debuts in New York recently.

One was Geza Anda, who appears as guest Sunday with the Vancouver Symphony Orchestra; the other Joerg Demus. No critic gave the impression that he thought either was a sensational virtuoso in relation to the current field of performing pianists, which is the impression many record-listeners have. But all critics commented on their soundness of technique—and the conservatism of their approach.

China Would Trade Peanuts for Wheat

VANCOUVER (CP)—The East-West Imports Co. Ltd. says Communist China wishes to trade 5,000 tons of shelled peanuts for 1,080,000 bushels of Canadian wheat.

Company spokesman Marshall Johnson said the bid was made to the company by "Nation Oil of Beijing."

He said Trade Minister Howe, in a Nov. 18 letter, approved the barter if it could be negotiated.

Mr. Johnson said a Vancouver area grain dealer was prepared to act on the offer if a deal could be made.

Negotiations would be conducted through the Chinese commercial attaché in London. The Chinese attaché, he added, asked that the wheat be shipped from an Atlantic port, with delivery in late December and early January.

Trade Minister Howe said in Victoria today the federal government would welcome an exchange of wheat for peanuts with Red China, if the transaction is carried out through commercial channels.

But he said there would be no government-to-government barter.

The trade minister said "We would be very pleased to have East-West make the barter. We'll provide the wheat if they can sell the peanuts."

Mr. Howe said if East-West can convert the peanuts to cash, and give us the cash for wheat—away we go.

He said there would be no barter between the two governments, directly, "especially with Red China, we have no relations."

EMPRESS OF AUSTRALIA TO MAKE LAST CROSSING

MONTREAL—The Dec. 5 sailing from Quebec of the Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of Australia, will mark the end of her service under the red and white checkered house-flag of Canadian Pacific Steamships.

The 19,800-ton vessel, recently put on the open market for sale, will be replaced in the trans-Atlantic service next year by the new 26,000-ton liner Empress of Britain, launched by Queen Elizabeth last June.

The Quebec sailing also marks an end to the Empress service to Montreal and Quebec this season.

$300,000,000 Spent On Alberta Industry

EDMONTON (CP)—An aggregate of more than $300,000,000 has been spent since 1950 in establishing new industries in Alberta and expanding old ones.

The figures were given by Richard Martland, provincial government industrial development director, in an address here.

Mr. Martland, attached to the economic affairs department, urged his listeners to buy more "made-in-Alberta" goods.

"Don't overlook Alberta industry," he said, "We have relied on the east for too long." However, the industrial development director added, he didn't want to see "a wall thrown up" around Alberta.

Mr. Martland brought samples of Alberta-made goods to show the province now has advanced industrially to the point where residents of the province are justified in supporting more home industries.

A map showed how the $300,000,000 has been invested since 1950, creating employment for 6,400 persons.

He outlined how the economic affairs department is bringing new investment capital into Alberta.

The department carried on its work through such branches as publicity, immigration, films, public relations, cultural activities, the Alberta House in London, England, and the industrial development branch.

His department sends material on Alberta industrial possibilities, population statistics and other data on request anywhere in the world.

ARGENTINE GETS LOAN FOR STEEL

BUENOS AIRES (UP)—The new Argentine government will be granted a $60,000,000 loan from the export-import bank for erection of a steel mill, it was announced here.

Dr. Raul Prebisch, United Nations economist now advising the government of provisional president Gen. Pedro E. Aramburu, said the loan documents would be signed in a day or so.

The loan originally was granted to the ousted government of Juan D. Peron, but it now will be taken up by the new revolutionary government.

Prebisch made the announcement following an hour-long meeting with Assistant U.S. Secretary of State for Latin American Affairs Henry F. Holland.

B.C. Executive Says Exports Lose Millions

VANCOUVER, B.C. (UP)—An executive member of the British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines told the Gordon Royal Commission that Canada is losing millions of dollars a month through the export of iron ore and the import of iron products.

Charles Campbell said the loss to this country amounted to some $100,000,000 a month. He told the five-man commission studying the nation's economic prospects that one answer to the problem would be the construction of a steel mill at Squamish, B.C.

Squamish was offering an opportunity that was becoming "rarer and rarer," Campbell said. He defined the opportunity as a site possessing ore, coal, limestone, railway connections and shipping facilities.

The mines spokesman told the commission that Canada recovers $7.25 per ton for the ore it exports while paying up to $132 per ton for the rolling mill products that are imported.

Canada's Natural Gas Sparks Western Oils

By PATRICK FELLOWS, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Brokers have all but given up their head-scratching in efforts to find reasons for the recent dull behavior of Canadian stock markets.

A sit-back-and-wait attitude appears to have assumed command, at least until the Christmas season is over.

While New York is nudging the record highs established immediately before President Eisenhower's illness broke the market Sept. 26, prices of industrials on Toronto and Montreal exchanges continue to dilly-dally somewhere between one-third and one-half of the road back.

Brokers, however, thought that in any case the market might be expected to show some decline in activity between now and Christmas. This was the picture last year.

None would say whether a similar upsurge is likely next year, but observers said the caution brought on by the three major market breaks in September and October and recent anti-inflationary measures by various government actions might continue for some time to come.

For Canadians, a specialty market has developed. Traders are on the sidelines but are ready to jump in where corporate developments warrants or where there is special news of significance to groups of stocks.

Such news of interest this week was the decision by the U.S. federal power commission to allow the import of Canadian natural gas into Pacific northwest states.

The decision sparked some brisk Monday dealings in western oil stocks on Canadian exchanges. But while there was a brief upsurge, selling developed and only selected issues retained their strength.

At Toronto, only the base metals index recorded an advance. There was some sharp trading in a few mining issues, sparked mainly by underwritings. Industrials eased about 2½ points in sluggish narrow-range trading.

Week's index changes at Toronto: Industrials down 2.69 to 428.27, golds down .20 to 84.85, base metals up .34 to 210.99 and western oils down 1.80 to 113.42.

Week's volume: 17,142,000 shares against previous week's 15,375,000. At New York, The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was down 80 cents to 118.50.

Week's index changes at Montreal: Banks down .01 to 49.10, utilities down .10 to 131.20, industrials down .30 to 232.00, combined down .20 to 238.40, papers up .57 to 140.00 and golds up .32 to 74.32.

Week's volume: 316,106 industrials and 3,106,220 mines. Previous week's volume: 271,603 industrials and 2,268,970 mines.

THIS WEEK IN BUSINESS

U.S. Government Boosts Buying Banks Get More Money to Lend

By WALTER BREED JR. NEW YORK (AP)—The United States government gave business a push this week.

As the Christmas buying rush swung into high gear, the government's top money manager—the federal reserve board—did a sudden about-face.

Instead of sopping up credit, the board began pumping a little extra money into circulation, by instructing the federal reserve banks to step up their purchases of U.S. treasury bonds.

Whenever the federal reserve banks buy government bonds, they make an increasing flow of cash available to commercial banks for lending.

One likely result of the government move is a guarantee that banks, department stores and auto finance companies won't be short of the funds they'll need to handle an expected record volume of Christmas business.

Merchants, polled by the National Retail Dry Goods Association, were unanimous in forecasting a banner Christmas season.

Biggest problem facing merchants was a shortage of holiday help.

EXTRA SPEED The booming auto industry put on an extra burst of speed this week. With Chevrolet, Ford and Plymouth working overtime, production was scheduled at 182,000 cars—just under the weekly high achieved last April.

In the 1953 production race, latest figures gave Chevrolet a slight edge over Ford. Buick placed third followed by Plymouth.

The industry's fierce production pace drew bitter criticisms this week from dealers appearing as witnesses at the Senate "study" of General Motors. The principal complaint was that retailers are being forced to accept more cars than they can profitably sell.

The steel industry showed new 100.1 per cent of capacity; output this week was scheduled at 99.2 per cent.

said steel mills now are competing with their own customers for the steel they need to build facilities for more production.

Steel price increases spread to additional products, notably cold rolled-strip steel, while dealers in steel scrap moved their prices up. Trade sources said the pinch would continue through the first six months of 1954, spurred by peak demand from the auto, construction and oil industries. Production a week ago was a record 2,416,000 tons with the mills straining at

VANCOUVER BREAKS BUILDING RECORDS

VANCOUVER (CP)—Construction in Vancouver will break all records this year, officials of the building department said here.

Total value of building construction to the end of November is $55,700,000—more than $3,700,000 ahead of the 12-month total for all of 1953, the previous record year.

GM President Says Firm Is Fair to All

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Harlow Curtice of General Motors Corporation, raked over the coals in public by some GM retail dealers, testified here that the giant auto firm plays fair with everybody.

No management organization he knows of, Curtice told the Senate anti-trust and monopoly sub-committee, has "a more general regard for the equities of the various group with which we have contact—customers, employers, suppliers, dealers and shareholders."

Senator Joseph O'Mahoney, Dem., Wyo., chairman of the subcommittee, let Curtice testify the stand after hearing testimony in which three dealers accused GM of treating them like "pawns and vassals," putting them under "almost diabolical" sales pressure and forcing them to buy equipment they did not need.

Curtice made no direct reference to the dealer criticism. He did say dealers' net profits before taxes are now $415,000,000 a year, compared with $72,000,000 in 1940.

M. H. Yager, Albany, N.Y., Pontiac dealer, the lead-off and star witness of the pre-lunch session, said pressure on GM dealers for sales volume is "almost diabolical."

He testified he knew of many other GM dealers who would like to testify except for "intimidation and fear."

Yager said the new tactics of GM include heavy pressure for sales volume, easy credit and other methods encouraging the bootlegging of cars.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER

If people aren't talking about the Grey Cup football final (and some still are), they're speaking of the Victoria Cougars of the Western Hockey League.

The terms being used, and the tones, have not been complimentary.

And so, objectively we trust, let's analyze the situation as it now stands.

WALKER

To go back to the beginning, the Cougars started this season with a batch of rookies, many of whom are still with the club.

They started the year with a new coach, Eddie Olson, long time star of Cleveland Barons of the American Hockey League.

They started the season without the services of three accomplished stars of the past—Ed Dorohoy, Andy Heberton and Pete Durham.

They started the season with spirits high and the onus of success resting mainly on the rookies, and Olson, in his first year as coach.

It was believed the others on the club, mostly holdovers, would do as well, if not better than in the past, although no one doubted that Dorohoy, Heberton and Durham would be missed.

That was the beginning, and a four-game winning streak helped those dreams soar a trifle.

But today, all is not rosy.

The Cougars have won only two of their last 10 games. They have lost seven in that string. Next week they invade the prairies where points will be hard to come by because of the severity of travel and schedule.

What has happened in the meantime?

Three of those rookies were assigned to defensive duty in a major experiment. They have made mistakes, that's certain. But basically the downfall of the club has not been their total blame, except for the inexplicable inability to get the puck out of their own end. This undoubtedly has hurt the club.

Only Results Count, Always

The other fledglings have been trying as best they know, but their efforts have fallen slightly short of what was expected. This has contributed to coach Olson's woes.

Frankly speaking Olson's playing star has not shone as brightly as it was hoped it would. And much in the manner as Billy Reay was accepted during his first year here, fans have expected more of him than they figure they have received.

It could be the burden of playing practically every position on the club, at one time or another, that has hindered him. Certainly it's far different than taking a regular turn and worrying about nothing else until that next turn comes along.

But that's a playing coach's lot. Only results count. And then there are the old hands.

Certainly, one shouldn't detract from the record of the Colin Kilburn, Doug Anderson, Doug Macaulay line.

Where the club would be without this unit is too obvious for comment. (Last night's game is a good example in point.)

Serenity, also, is a wonderful factor in a club. But the view is that some players have abused the privilege this year. Their efforts have not been consistent with what is needed to provide a contender.

The Offenders Have Been Advised

It's not a pretty picture at the moment. We admit that. So does coach Olson. So does managing director Fred Hutchinson. And so do the players.

But we don't go for the thought that no attempt is being made to rectify the problem.

The players have been advised, either by plain words, or by innuendo, that better is expected, and must come.

And some, it might be said, have received their last caution. Suffice to say, in closing, that Hutchinson's remarks of late: "There'll be some changes made," should become a reality by next week.

Just as Hutchinson admits: "It has to be."

But soon.

Americans Find Key; Flyers Take Step Up

Seattle 2, Winnipeg 1; Edmonton 7, Saskatoon 6

It took four games and then some for Seattle Americans to get their first victory on the prairies in Western Hockey League action.

The then some was overtime Friday as the Americans edged Winnipeg Warriors, 2-1, after suffering three previous losses.

Edmonton Flyers also had to go into overtime to get past Saskatoon Quakers, 7-6, in the Alberta capital. Winnipeg's Ed Mazur counted the game's first goal at 17:26 of the first period. Ed Dorohoy had it tied for the Americans only 26 seconds later.

Bart Bradley fired the winning counter 1:09 through the overtime session. He backhanded a shot into the corner of the Warrior net.

The Flyers regained second place in the Prairie circuit after their win. They are still five points behind Calgary Stampeders, who were idle Friday.

BATHGATE STARS IN RANGER WIN

He Loves Those Hawks

New York 2, Chicago 1

By The Canadian Press

Andy Bathgate is one National Hockey League player who would like to play all his games against Chicago Black Hawks.

The 23-year-old centre scored a goal and assisted on the other Friday night as New York Rangers stretched their undefeated streak to six games with a 2-1 victory over the Hawks at Chicago before 7,886 fans.

In five games against Chicago this season, Bathgate has scored four of his goals and has 11 assists. His total points—23 from six goals and 17 assists—puts him fourth in the league's individual scoring race, along with Maurice Richard of Montreal Canadiens and Dave Creighton are New York's leading scorers.

The win was Rangers' 12th in 23 starts this season.

Bathgate, a 20-goal man with the New Yorkers last season, started the scoring with a goal at 12:08 of the first period.

Hawks' Johnny Wilson was serving a boarding penalty at the time. At the 17:09 mark, Prentice finished off a play with Bathgate and Don Raleigh by beating Chicago

A SCRIBE'S-EYE VIEW

Why do sportswriters see hockey games differently than the average fan? Because they have an entirely different view from their lofty press-box seats, as in this panoramic view of the Vancouver Canucks defensive zone. Cougar coach Eddie Olson has Cougar Pride Triumphs --Last Time for Some?

Victoria 4, Vancouver 2

By BILL WALKER

It was a matter of pride for Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena Friday night.

Bridled of late by accusations of incompetence, a recent dismal record bearing out the allegations, the Cougars looked to themselves for the answer.

Their personal feelings were at stake as well as the result of their Western Hockey League game with Vancouver Canucks.

And the result was a noteworthy 4-2 triumph over the western divisional leaders to snap a lethargic streak that previously had totaled only one victory in nine games.

Noteworthy, also, was the game because it may have marked the final appearance of some players here.

For the Canucks, they may have taken the Cougars too lightly, a first-place club being inclined to be a little vain at times. But whether they did or not, their vanity was crushed by a Cougar squad that deserved this one.

Readily willing to admit it was Pat Egan, the slab-sided hunk of man, who is the Canucks' assistant coach.

"They looked much better," he said of the Cougars, "and they skated well."

"Also," Pat continued, "that big line of their (Kilburn, Anderson, Macaulay) is a smart line, and as dangerous as I've seen."

Colin Kilburn got two goals and Doug Anderson did likewise. Macaulay assisted on two and Anderson on both of Kilburn's counters. The four-goal output brought this unit's season total to 37 goals of the 69 scored by the club.

Cougar coach Eddie Olson, who last Tuesday declined comment on the club in the loss to Regina, tabbed the improvement to "skating."

And that the Cougars did as they played the Canucks much better than even for two periods, in establishing a 3-0 margin and then bowed a trifle to the Canucks pressure in the final 20 minutes. However, the danger of losing was never imminent, as had been the recent trademark.

Anderson clearly was the most opportune player on the

Tech Student Riot Greet's Race Edict

State Capitol Stormed In Protest of Bowl Ban

By JAN THOMAS, United Press Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA (UP) — Governor Marvin Griffin's attempt to ban Georgia Tech's Sugar Bowl football game because rival Pittsburgh has a Negro player touched off a mighty demonstration of near-riot proportions by Tech students early today.

There were no injuries, nor any arrests, but the excited college boys clashed repeatedly with troopers armed with tear gas grenades and fought their way by guards to storm the state capitol.

The demonstration was blunted on the steps of the huge stone executive mansion that was guarded by a phalanx of police, state troopers and Georgia bureau of investigation agents.

State Rep. Mugsy Smith, who lives near the mansion, was partly responsible for cooling feverish tempers of the undergrads.

Smith, a Tech graduate, promised the rioters that "we are going to the Sugar Bowl."

Smith told United Press he had not been authorized to make the statement, that he was simply trying to halt a riot but that he earnestly believed the game would be played. The legislator and Griffin are on opposite sides of the political fence, however.

Governor Stands by Policy

As for Griffin, he stood by his action of yesterday which started all the trouble. He then wired the chairman of the state board of regents, all-powerful agency supervising Georgia's education institutions, and asked him to summon the board to forbid Tech to play in the Sugar Bowl should its opponent use a Negro player or should the stands be non-segregated.

Griffin, talking by telephone with newsmen while the crowd of shouting, horn-blowing students swirled about outside, said he would not retract his request that the game be called off.

After the boisterous students finally departed in the early morning hours, Griffin left home for a weekend quail hunt.

Mrs. Griffin said, however, that he had not changed his position one bit because of the demonstration.

"He paced the floor while it was going on," she said, "and said several times that a man who believes in a principle doesn't change his position because of a demonstration."

In response to Griffin's virtual order to the regents, chairman Robert O. Arnold called a meeting for Monday to decide what to do about the touchy situation.

Students Clash With Troopers

Some 2,000 angry students tried to storm the governor's mansion after leaving the state capitol a shambles but they were forced back by a cordon of hundreds of police and state highway patrolmen.

The students fought with building guards and Georgia bureau of investigation agents on the capitol steps before they marched on Griffin's official residence in the three-hour demonstration.

A solid line of city and county police and troopers at the mansion, reinforced by detachments from seven other cities, forced back the throng of shouting, placard waving students. Police held their clubs in ready position but did not use them and troopers held tear gas grenades.

By the time the out-of-town patrolmen began arriving on the scene the throng of placard-bearing, torch-waving students at the mansion had grown to an estimated 2,000 or more, according to a patrol estimate.

They carried signs reading, "We want to go to the Sugar Bowl," "grow up, Griffin," and "Talmadge's puppet has done it again."

This was a reference to the fact that Griffin went into office last January with the support of outgoing Gov. Herman Talmadge, one of the south's most outspoken segregationists.

'Dark and Lamentable Hour'

Griffin, in asking the regents to call off the Sugar Bowl game, said the south "stands at Armageddon—we cannot make the slightest concession to the enemy in this dark and lamentable hour of struggle."

"There is no more difference in compromising integrity of race on the playing field than in doing so in the classroom."

The Georgia Legislature has passed and the voters have approved a so-called private school amendment to the state constitution which would permit the closing of all Georgia public schools if necessary to avert mixed race classrooms.

"One break in the dike and the relentless seas will push in and destroy us," Griffin said.

Island Hockey Offers Much More Monday

Doug Fletcher is waiting for Monday like a little boy waiting for Christmas.

The president of the Vancouver Island Amateur Hockey League has named Monday "Fan Appreciation Night" at Memorial Arena, a night in which he hopes to restore the fan attendance that has fallen off so disastrously this year.

Between 20 and 30 merchandise prizes will be given away to fans between the two scheduled games.

The first game, starting at 7:30, matches Drake Hotel with Navy. In the feature game, at 9, Nanaimo Clippers tangle with C & C Taxi.

Virdon, who succeeded a teammate, outfielder Wally Moon, for the honor, collected 15 votes in the balloting by a 24-man committee.

Runner-up was pitcher Jack Meyer of Philadelphia Phillies, who received seven 'votes. The other two votes went to relief pitcher Don Bessent of the world champion Brooklyn Dodgers.

Virdon, who was acquired by the Cards from New York Yankees in the Enos Slaughter deal, appeared in 144 Cardinal games this summer. He had 150 hits, including 18 doubles, six triples and 17 home runs. He drove in 68 runs. He is also a fine defensive player.

WON'T HURT

Potgieter Packs His Gloves

LONDON (AP)—Giant fighter Ewart Potgieter today decided to quit the ring because "I don't like hurting others."

The 325-pound, seven-foot-two South African whose clenched fist measures 15½ inches, has chalked up nine victories and one draw in 18 months of fighting.

Now he says he is "fed up" with fighting. "I have never been hurt myself in the ring and I don't like hurting others. I am going back to South Africa."

He came to London Aug. 2 to get more experience before taking a trip to the United States. He won two of his fights in London rings and then fought a draw against six-foot-five Canadian James J. Parker here Nov. 15.

Clippers Take Over Scoring, Too

League-leading Nanaimo Clippers all but dominate top spots in the Vancouver Island Amateur Hockey League scoring race, according to figures released Friday.

Angelo Defelice of the Clippers leads the way with 15 goals and six assists, for 21 points, followed by teammates Bill Sutherland and Arnie Dugan with 18 and 16 points respectively.

Sutherland also tops the penalty-getters with 27 minutes, while Nanaimo goalkeepers Fred Medley, with a 4.00 percentage, and Spanky Hodgson with 4.80, lead in the goals-against department.

Scoring championship will be decided on percentage of points per game. At the present time Neil Standley is leading with a 3.33 points per game with Red Carr second with a 2.66 and Angelo Defelice third with 2.63 points a game.

A Week's Work

By DENNY BOYD

The Spider is busily spinning another web of success up Alberni way and beneath the pungent smoke of the mill-town may roost Canada's 1956 Olympic basketball team.

Elmer "The Spider" Spidel is a young man in the rather ironic position of being an American who holds the possible destiny of Canadian Olympic hopes in Melbourne this year.

But the Seattle University ace is a guy who is used to looking big problems in the eye and staring them down. And, as coach of the Canadian champion Alberni Athletics, his problem this year is to come up with an encore on last year's dominion title series and then supply a topper — success in the Olympics.

It's a big load, but it is placed in the hands of a very capable young man of Vancouver Island. No one knew him and he was tossed into the middle of the most bubbling basketball pot in Canada and was given the go-ahead sign.

was all being reserved for the O'Briens — Johnny and Eddy.

Al Brightman, Seattle U. coach who first led the O'Briens into the spotlight, was in Alberni this year and he told a group of Alberni fans that Spidel was the greatest player he had ever coached — including the Big "O" brothers. Now that's a statement that must be taken with a grain of salt but, nevertheless, the man said it.

After college, Elmer spent two years overseas packing a Marine Corps rifle. On arriving back stateside, he received an offer from Alberni and he came to the valley, the loneliest young man of Vancouver Island.

They Got to Know Elmer Quickly

He made his introduction in short order. The first year he led the A's to the Western final. The second year they went all the way, right to the Canadian title.

Elmer is 6 feet 1 inch, has a boyish, shy grin, has a two-year average of 16.4 points per game and is married to an Alberni girl.

This year, however, Elmer has not been seeing as much action as in the past and that is the way it must be. He is not a Canadian citizen and thus is not eligible to compete for Canada.

When Alberni lines up in Vancouver this March for the zone knockout tournament that will decide the Canadian representative to the Olympics, Elmer will be on the bench.

The very fact that he has been the inspirational leader of the team since he first joined it, is the one big problem facing the club.

Victoria's Johnny Clark has joined up with the Alberni team this year and he realizes the problem.

Says big John, "The team is going to have to learn to work without Elmer. He's the middle man on the fast breaks and the man who makes the ball work. When he's not on the floor, we don't seem to have the same drive. We're sure going to have to get over that if we want to go to the Olympics."

Better Now, Even Without Coach

Fred Bishop, the bald, serious little man who has taken Alberni from nowhere to the top as team manager, echoes Clark's statements in a more reserved vein.

"We're going to miss Elmer out on the floor but he will still be a great help on the bench. But even without Elmer, I think our team will be improved over last year."

"John Kootenoff has improved tremendously this year, Clark can't help but add to our scoring strength and Doug Brinham is looking very good."

"We have Ron Grey back with us and while he's not high scorer, he's a top defensive man and we hope to pick up Bill Bell."

played with UBC and Eilers in Vancouver.

This year the A's have won 10 games and lost four, two each to Seattle Buchanan's Bakers and West Seattle Fords. Buchans are one of the top teams in the U.S. Last year they lost out in the last few minutes to Peoria, who wound up as National AAU champs. This year the Bakers have added to their lineup and have three players over 6' 8".

The Bakers, too, are gunning for a trip to Australia this year. It is well within the realm of possibility that they will be seeing The Spider and his adopted Alberni countrymen again—in Australia. That would be fair dinkum.

Browns Bid for Sixth Football Title Sunday

NEW YORK (AP)—Cleveland Browns can clinch their sixth straight divisional title in the National Football League Sunday. What saves that situation from monotony is that the contender this season is Washington.

This season has brought a change with the revived young Redskins, featuring the league's stoutest defence, trailing the Browns by only a half-game with two more to play. Washington takes on New York Giants Sunday while Cleveland plays the hapless Pittsburgh Steelers.

The western division offers a tighter race. It's a three-way affair involving Los Angeles Rams, Chicago Bears and Baltimore Colts in that order. It also could end Sunday, but more likely the decision will rest on the final regular-season games next week.

The pairings Sunday are Baltimore vs. Los Angeles and the Bears vs. Detroit Lions, with the Rams and Bears getting whatever advantage goes with playing at home. The oddsmakers usually figure that's worth a couple of points.

If the Browns 7-2-1 beat Pittsburgh and the Redskins 7-3-1 lose to the Giants, Cleveland will get the eastern conference title a week early. Similarly, if the Rams 6-3-1 win from Baltimore 5-4-1 and the Bears 6-4-1 lose to the Lions, the western race will be over.

ON THE ALLEYS

A Bonspiel for Bowlers, Yet!

It's official now. The 1956 edition of the North Western International Bowling Congress annual tenpin tournament will be at Seattle.

The tourney will open April 28 at Seattle Recreation alleys and close May 20.

Events are as follows: Open teams 885 and over, commercial teams up to 800; open doubles 353 and over, commercial doubles 332 and over; open singles 177 and over, commercial singles 176 and under.

A total of 416 teams rolled for honors at Portland last spring, and tourney officials are hoping for a larger entry next year.

Talking of tournaments, here's one for local fivepinners which has never, to our knowledge, been tried before in a bowling alley.

From out Esquimalt way comes word of a bowlers' bonspiel. That's right, bowlers' bonspiel!

If you're a curlier, you'll know how it works. If not, then the best way is to find out through alley-boss Larry Marshall, a curlier of note.

It works something like this: Thirty-two teams will be allowed to compete. They will be given numbers and drawn from a hat with first-round match play starting on Dec. 10.

First-round winners will advance on one side of the draw, losers on the other.

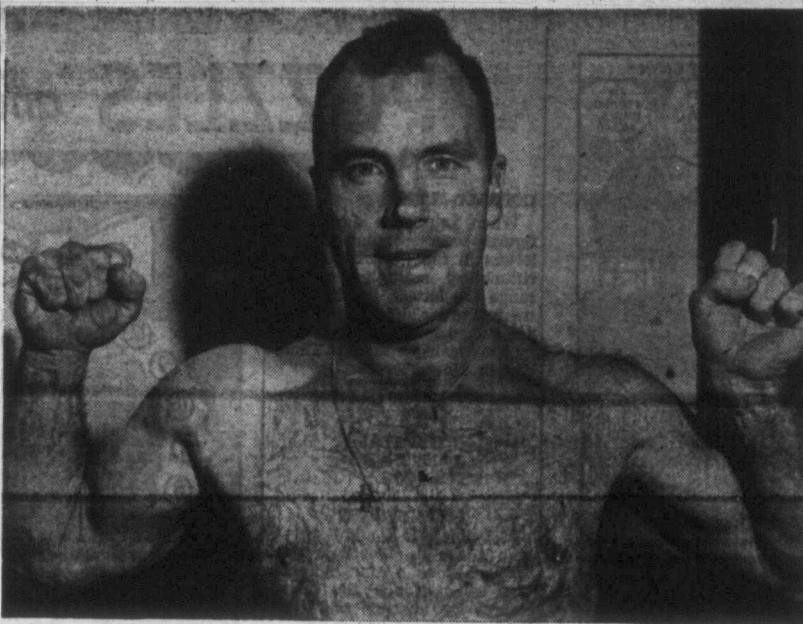

After the first three rounds there will be four possible winners on each side. Losers to that point will drop into a secondary event.

Teams may be composed of three men and two women, or three women and two men.

Prizes consist of wrist watches, cameras, television lamps and other jewelry.

If it goes over in a big way, prizes of much more value are forecast for next year.

Fivepin honors this week went to Lloyd Chow with an 861 (346) effort at Gibson's, followed by Bill McKinnon, 813 (322); Ike Brown, 794

MARTIN JOSEPH EGAN—Canucks' man of muscle.

Sure, and Pat Says It; Me, I'm Second to Art

By BILL RAYNER

Sure, and his name is Martin Joseph Egan, but they all call him Pat.

He is a fine broth of an Irish boy by way of Blackie, Alberta (April 26, 1918), and, every where but Vancouver, he is the assistant-coach of the Vancouver Canucks in the Western Hockey League.

In Vancouver, they still call him the coach.

"A couple of those blankety-blank reporters in Vancouver got it mixed up that I was coach, and they won't change their mind," Egan said Friday night, waiting for the Canucks to meet Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena.

"Art Chapman is still the coach. And I was signed as assistant-coach and defenceman in Boston before the season started. That's all I am, assistant-coach."

The foregoing was freely translated, as Pat's speech is as colorful as his brawny blue-line career. Pat came to Vancouver from Providence of the American Hockey League, where he had spent the past five years. Before that it was the old Brooklyn Americans, Detroit, Boston and New York in the NHL. Eleven long years he spent, bouncing them in the big time.

He's got the muscle for it, too. His several square yards of torso and five feet 10 inches, simply seared and chewed up, carry about 200 pounds of businesslike hockey player, give or take a few ounces.

As has been mentioned, Martin Joseph Egan talks a good game of hockey, too.

"You'll never see a sour look on my kisser," he said Friday night, "as long as we're on top. I can't squawk."

That was before the game. After the game, which the league-leading Canucks lost, 4-2, Egan's kisser was still unscathed because, of course, you can't win them all.

He did admit, however, that a couple of wingmen were being summoned from the east to bolster the Canucks.

"Can't remember their names, but they'll be in Vancouver next week. This is going to be a dog-eat-dog league, and we need all the help we can get."

The league, as Pat says, may be a tough one, especially for 37-year-old defencemen, but he hopes to go another couple of years before the legs give out. And then what?

"Oh, maybe a coach's job, some place," said assistant-coach Egan, "some place."

Coast Hockey Parley Sunday

This year's resignation of the Victoria Minor Hockey Association from the Pacific Coast Amateur Hockey Association will be one of the points of discussion at the PCAHA meeting in Nanaimo's Malaspina Hotel, Sunday at 2.

Also to be discussed are new rules in minor hockey, ice time for minor league players and a request by the VMHA to be released of mutual aid obligations.

Delegates are expected from the Vancouver Island Amateur Hockey League, the Vancouver Island Suburban League, Powell River, Kerrisdale, New Westminster, Vancouver Forum and North Vancouver.

'Babe' Better

GALVESTON, Tex. (AP)—Mrs. Babe Didrikson-Zaharias, well-known woman athlete, said Tuesday she felt better than at any time since she entered hospital last Sunday.

Mrs. Zaharias, who twice has undergone surgery for cancer, entered the hospital after recurring hip and leg pains. She reported she had no pain Friday—the second day of such comfort.

Soccer Schedule

Second division of the Victoria and District Football Association will get its kicks in Sunday with two games scheduled.

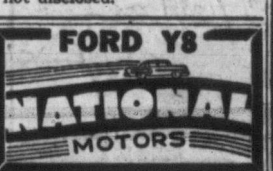

Feature match will have undefeated Tillamook attempting to prolong their streak when they meet Dutch Wanderers at Central Park at 2.

In the other game, also at 2, Brodie's Bakery will meet the still-winless Queen's Own Rifles at lower Beacon Hill Park.

PEAHEAD SIGNS NEW CONTRACT

MONTREAL (CP)—Doug Peahead Walker has signed a new three-year contract to coach Montreal Alouettes of the Big Four Football Union. It was announced Friday night.

Leo Dandurend, president of the Alouettes, made the announcement from Toronto, where he has gone to attend today's all-star East-West football game. The terms were not disclosed.

'Go-V's-Go' Going Wrong Direction Now

Gloom settled over Penticton Friday night when the Vs sank for the first time in three seasons to the basement of the Okanagan Senior Hockey League.

The drop to the cellar was executed by Kelowna Packers. Packers drubbed the original "Go-Vs-Go" gang 6-2.

Packers, sparked by Brian Roche with two goals, moved into a 2-1 lead in the first frame, then pounded home four goals to one in the second.

Penticton pressed hard in the third period, but failed to score on netminder Dave Gathernum.

On the other end of the OSHL ladder, the top-rung Vernon Canadians edged the Kamloops Elks 3-2 on Kamloops ice. Canadians' Frank King managed the last-minute goal to give his team their 16th win in 19 starts.

Balance swung evenly in the first two periods as the teams traded single goals, but King's close shot on Don Moog gave Vernon the margin while Elks' Don Slater was serving a penalty.

Tonight's OSHL slate puts Kamloops at Kelowna and Penticton at Vernon. In the neighboring Western International loop Spokane plays at Nelson and Trail at Kimberley.

Bruins, Bears Switch Players

BOSTON (AP)—Boston Bruins, who haven't won a game in their last nine National Hockey League encounters, Friday recalled two Hershey farmhands and optioned three players to that American Hockey League club.

Ordered to report here in time for tonight's game against Detroit Red Wings were Lionel Heinrich, rugged 30-year-old defenceman, and Allan Nicholson, 19-year-old left-winger.

Optioned to Hershey were forwards Eddie Panagabko, Lorne Davis and Orval Tessier.

Heinrich and Nicholson, like Panagabko, are products of the Bruins-sponsored Humboldt, Sask., Indians, a junior team.

Berra Most Valuable For Third Time in AL

CHICAGO (AP)—Catcher Yogi Berra of the New York Yankees today was named the American League's most valuable player for the second successive year and the third time in his career.

The honor, voted by the Baseball Writers' Association of America, put the squatty Berra in a bracket with Jimmy Foxx and Joe DiMaggio, the only other three-time American League winners.

Foxx won the award in 1932 and 1933 with Philadelphia, and in 1938 with Boston. DiMaggio was the winner in 1939, 1941 and 1947 with the Yankees.

Berra, who also was the most valuable player in 1951 and 1954, became the 10th Yankee to win the award since it was initiated in 1931.

KALINE IS SECOND

Outfielders Al Kaline of Detroit and Al Smith of Cleveland finished second and third, respectively, with Boston's Ted Williams in fourth place.

Some critics say the bookies must be banned but others hold their role to be traditional and indispensable.

CHANCY BUSINESS

With costs rising and prize money stationary, owning horses has become a quixotic proposition. At one fall meeting, total purse money for three events mainly came from entry fees and forfeits, the track contribution only $37.

The money shortage spreads malaise throughout the industry. Stable lads, lured by higher wages in factories, remain in the game mainly through love of horses or loyalty to an employer. Many trainers find it hard to get by without shrewd investments on some carefully prepared "steepers."

The season opened on a low key, the newspaper strike preventing fans from getting a line on the daily entries. Then the summer fall strike forced postponement of the greatest race meeting in the country, Royal Ascot. After that came an epidemic of coughing which affected most stables and lasted longer than usual, upsetting training schedules.

The Ascot Gold Cup went to an Italian horse, Botticelli, and a series of rich races in the autumn were captured by French-trained thoroughbreds. The main consolation for Britain was the sparkling performance of Lady Zia Wertheimer's Meld, a three-year-old filly. Meld won the One Thousand Guineas, the Oaks and the St. Leger and was possibly the best of her age in Europe.

BEASTALL ADVISES

Provident Gardener's Store Proves Boon as Prices Soar

Early December is the time to give fruits and vegetables in storage their first thorough check.

Maybe you noticed how the prices of vegetables went up as the temperatures went down last month. Carrots doubled their price, potatoes jumped 30 cents on a 25-pound bag, and local cabbages and Brussels sprouts disappeared from the stores.

Under such conditions the gardener with fruits and vegetables in storage is well repaid for his efforts in producing the crops and for his time in storing them properly.

With the advent of December it is wise to look over these stored crops carefully to see that storage conditions are suitable and to remove any fruit or vegetable which has developed storage rot before it infects its neighbors.

In the case of root crops stored in sand or other media, the removal of two or three top layers will give an idea if sufficient or too much moisture is present.

A representative number of wrapped fruits should be unwrapped to determine their condition. Cutting and tasting may be necessary in some instances.

Testing the firmness without bruising of fruits not unwrapped will reveal those which are deteriorating.

When checking potatoes it is a good idea to select a representative assortment for immediate use. In this way bacterial ring rot and dry cores will be discovered.

Quite a few root crops are still in the open garden. Samples of these should be dug in order to know their condition.

A much of loose material may be needed for added protection, or it may be better to remove them to inside storage.

The decision will be governed by the condition of the roots and the condition of the soil in which they are growing.

Since so much damage was done to commercial vegetable crops during November it will pay extra good care of any crops they may have.

Chives, mint, parsley and tarragon are seasonings which are much appreciated during winter. Each of these may be had fresh if they are grown in pots on a cool window-sill, or in small boxes in a greenhouse or sunporch.

Established plants are carefully dug from the garden and placed in a rich soil containing about 25 per cent peat-based fertilizer. Growth is soon apparent and careful watering will give tender shoots for use when needed.

If large quantities of these herbs are used it is better to make up three or four pots or boxes of each, taking one indoors immediately and leaving the others in a sheltered or protected place outside to bring in when the first plants are stripped.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Cut down dead stems on all herbaceous plants in the garden, as chrysanthemum, solidago (golden rod) and aster (Michaelmas daisy).

Keep glass, benches and walls clean in greenhouse or heated porch where plants are being grown.

Feed pot plants which are showing flower buds and give weaker doses to those being grown for foliage only.

Coelogyne cristata, the easily grown fragrant orchid with sprays of white bloom, is making flower buds now. Keep fairly dry until the buds show.

Temperature need only be around 55-60 degrees Fahrenheit.

Chrysanthemums in pots which have finished flowering should be cut down. Store pots (containing the roots) in a cold frame or under bench in greenhouse.

Examine stored vegetables and fruits.

Roots of perennial herbs may be dug and planted in pots or flats for winter use.

Rhododendrons, azaleas and camellias need a top dressing of peat moss, leaf mold or rotted compost. This treatment will even benefit those not entirely killed by frost last month.

LOVELY BOULEVARD ROSE SUBJECT OF ENQUIRIES

Each year hundreds of requests are received by the Parks Department as to the name of the red rose growing on the Blanshard Street Greens. The name is Firefly, a hybrid polyanthus type of rose which blooms continuously from late May until the heavy frosts of late winter set in. Besides its outstanding free blooming qualities it is a low-growing rose which makes it valuable for the small garden, particularly alongside a walk or in the front of a flower border. It is available from local nurseries.

It originated in Germany in 1938 under the name of Holstein; but was introduced into Canada by the late H. M. Eddie of Vancouver under the name of Firefly.

Dozens of varieties of roses have been tested for display in beds in public places in Victoria and Firefly is still the best all-round polyanthus type of rose.

Another good red hybrid polyanthus rose is Frensham, an English variety introduced in 1946. It grows in Pioneer Square. It is quite tall and should be planted two and a half to 3 feet apart. Firefly can be planted about 20 inches apart.

Dry Wells Help Solve Rain Drainage Problem

By MR. FIX

Inhabitants of certain arid areas are understandably different to the matter of rainfall drainage. But elsewhere the drainage problem is acute, or will be in the spring, and now is a good time to begin thinking what to do about it.

One solution is to install "dry wells" to catch the runoff of rain water from your roof. Another is to connect downspouts directly to storm sewers at the street.

Since storm sewers don't exist in many sections, and since the connections are often difficult to make, dry wells are usually the more practical way to get rid of rain water which might otherwise seep into your basement or damage your lawn.

Dry wells are connected to downspouts by vitreous sewer tiles, so that water flowing from the roof is dispersed at some distance from the house and absorbed by the subsoil.

Good, permanent dry wells can be built of cesspool block, concrete block or stone. Some-

Carpets Muffle Age of Noise; Easy on Upkeep

By W. E. TREADWELL

What makes a home quieter and more comfortable while being easy to clean and maintain? Only carpet meets all these needs, all of them important if your house or apartment is to be a home in the true sense of the word.

In this age of noise, from traffic, aircraft, radio and television, it is essential for anyone's peace of mind that all unnecessary clutter should be banished from the home. Carpets, with their deep resilience, are just the thing to deaden even the heaviest footsteps.

Make sure that you have good carpets not only in the living room but also in the halls, on the stairs, and in the bedrooms. Not only will they cut out the thud of footfalls; the presence of carpet on the floors will help to suppress all other noises.

It is remarkable that so many advantages can be had from something so easy to look after as a carpet. No elaborate program of cleaning is necessary. The pile has a wonderful way of resisting the effects of dust and dirt and helping to keep itself clean.

A vacuum cleaner or carpet sweeper will make an easy task of such maintenance work as is needed. The important point is to be ready with a clean, damp cloth to remove any mark as it appears. Never allow a light-colored carpet to get really dirty before giving it attention.

Two-Bedroom Bungalow Compact Could Be Built on Narrow Lot

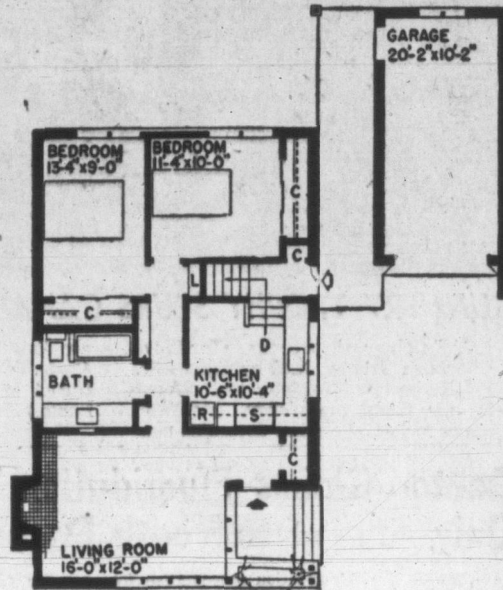

Although of modest dimensions, here is a pleasingly designed two-bedroom bungalow which creates an impression of good living and stability. Designed by architect F. R. Barnes of Toronto, this house, without the garage, would be particularly adaptable for a narrow lot.

The living room, which extends across the full width of the house is well lighted through the use of seven large windows in a "corner" arrangement and contains a fireplace with tile hearth. The flower box bordering the steps to the protected front entrance provides a touch of color. The entrance to the kitchen is handy to the garage, which is finished in brick with a paneled wood door. Both bedrooms are of ample size and contain generous wall-to-wall clothes closets.

The total floor area of the house, excluding the garage, is 884 square feet, while the cubic measurement is 17,000 cubic feet. The exterior dimensions of the house are 38 feet two inches by 24 feet eight inches. Working drawings for this house, known as Design 126, may be obtained from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at minimum cost.

Frozen Shrub Undergoes Odorous Chemical Change

By JACK BEASTALL

Q.—There is a strong objectionable odor being given off by a large laurustinus shrub near my house path. I have never noticed this before. Could it be due to the frost action which has completely browned the whole shrub?

A.—The strong odor given off by badly frozen laurustinus (Viburnum tinus) is apparently characteristic. Probably the oil content of the evergreen leaves has been changed chemically by the frost. However, do not cut it down until spring. The damaged portion will protect the new growth which can even now be noticed close to soil level.

FIX-IT FORUM

Q: I'm told that a certain kind of acid is used in the making of candles. Since I'd like to make some Christmas candles, can you tell me what acid it is, what it does, and where I can get some?—Mrs. B.T.

A: Called stearic acid, it is used by candle makers to give their candles a rich, creamy appearance and to make them harder so they won't lose shape in warm weather. It can be purchased at most drug stores. One part stearic acid to four parts paraffin gives excellent results.

Boards, Bricks Make Lovely Book Shelves

Something you can build yourself without even hammer or nails is a set of black bookshelves spaced by rose-colored bricks. Eighteen bricks, three boards, sandpaper and paint are all you need. Plywood is recommended for the shelves, but their length and depth are up to you.

The base is made of three bricks, one at each end and one in the centre. On these is laid the first board. Three piles of three bricks each are then placed on the board, in line with the base bricks. These hold the second shelf. To support the third shelf, two sets of three bricks, spaced between the lower one, should be sufficient. There is no need for mortar or nails and even the greenest beginner at do-it-yourself projects should have no trouble. The bookshelf unit is solid and steady and has the advantage of being portable.

To finish the shelves, sand the wood carefully. If you want to cover the raw edges of the plywood, tack on a narrow moulding. Then for a really first-rate job apply two or even three coats of eggshell black enamel, sanding between coats with very fine sandpaper. If you don't care for the color of your bricks, then paint them too! Flat wall paint gives the best results and it comes in delightful shades.

Dragging Crew Recovers Body

LAKE COWICHAN—Body of Tom Hewitt, 39, of Duncan, who drowned Thursday at Honeymoon Bay, on Cowichan Lake, while yarding logs with horses on the lake shore, was recovered Friday afternoon.

Civic Revenue At Qualicum Now $54,667

QUALICUM BEACH—Excellent year of municipal progress was reviewed at the annual ratepayers' meeting in the community hall here by commission chairman V. Craig Reid.

Revenue is up to $54,667, and 95 per cent of current taxes have been collected. He said expenditures to the end of the year will be about $51,000, of which the public works department spent $18,000.

There were 33 building permits issued, representing a value of $146,000. New civic hall has been completed and will be in use shortly.

Municipal area was increased from 1,060 to 1,210 acres by extension of village boundaries, thus raising land assessment $6,700, and improvements $11,912.

Extensive program of grading, widening and graveling of side roads was carried out, and it is hoped that most will be black topped next year.

GOOD WATER SUPPLY

The greatly expanded water department continues successful with unlimited water available from two wells Mr. Reid said, and no sprinkling restrictions have been in force since they came in use. Much of the bank balance of $3,600 will probably be used in replacing old wooden pipe at the west end of the highway on the beach, and on Chester Road.

Mr. Reid will seek re-election to the village commission Dec. 8. Others contesting the 20 commission seats up for election are Commissioner Frank Morgan and M. H. Cree.

A team of Navy frogmen from Victoria failed to find the man because of the depth, darkness, and generally littered condition of the lake bottom.

He was found at 3.30 p.m. through dragging operations directed by RCMP Cpl. Dan Thompson. About 10 men from the surrounding area gave assistance.

Hewitt's death, witnessed by his 18-year-old son, was described by others as a "freak" accident.

HORSES DROWNED

He had been working on shore, but for some reason had driven his team into the lake to secure another log. While the horses were pulling, their harness fouled a snag, and it was set so that the harder they pulled, the farther they were forced to deeper water.

They finally stumbled beyond their depth, panicked, and drowned after a struggle. Hewitt, who was astride one of the horses, was unable to swim and could not save himself.

He was found in water 35 deep, close to shore but at the foot of a sudden drop. Coroner J. H. Boyd has not yet decided whether an inquest or inquiry will be held into the tragedy.

Hewitt is survived by his widow and a second son, aged 10 years.

Scout Committee Whist Raises $58

LANGFORD—A whist party held by Langford Scout Group Committee in the Legion Hall, Dunford Road, with nine tables in play, resulted in a profit of $58.

High scores were made by T. McKay and Mrs. E. Thow.

Next entertainment by the committee will be the showing of Jamboree pictures Dec. 7, at 8 p.m. in the Legion Hall. There will be no admission charge.

Doctor Claims Fluoridation Only Answer to Tooth Decay

CHEMAINUS — Fluoridation is the answer to tooth decay, Dr. E. W. Best, public health officer for the Upper Island area, told Chemainus PTA at a meeting here.

There are 'already too few dentists in Canada, and fluoridation is the only solution we have for getting at tooth decay,' he said. 'Everyone seemed to accept the fact that fluoridation prevented tooth decay,' he said, 'so what other solution is there?'

The general public had shown a great deal of confidence in the Salk vaccine, 'yet it was far less proven than fluoridation,' he said.

Some 22 communities in Canada with populations of under 1,000 had fluoridated water supplies. Regarding the cost of installing a system, Dr. Best said, 'it will cost the average person a package of cigarettes a year.' He was impressed with the 'tremendous amount of agreement among doctors, dentists, and public health groups, who favored fluoridation as a safe, preventative measure for controlling tooth decay.

'It is difficult to imagine how or why these groups would cooperate to push fluoridation on the public if they felt it was harmful,' Dr. Best said.

Vancouver Island Viewpoint

From Up-Island Newspaper Editorial Columns

The Correct View

THE REVIEW, SIDNEY—Board of trustees of Saanich School District No. 63 arrived at the right answer. We refer to the board's decision to discuss with representatives of the Sidney village commission the possibility of the two administrative bodies erecting a common office building. Under the plan as suggested by the village fathers, a new and modern administration centre could be erected at a material saving in cost.

What surprises us is that there should be any objection to such negotiations. For it is difficult for The Review to visualize any commissioner or trustee who would not be willing and anxious to save taxpayers every dollar possible. If the plan does not encompass a real cash saving to taxpayers—many of them paying taxes to both the village and for education—it is worthless. But if it saves even a fraction of a mill on the taxes of already overburdened property owners, it has much to commend it.

To our certain knowledge, a combined administrative building works very smoothly in Mission City, B.C. There it has saved the taxpayers money. The Review knows of no reason why such a project could not be made to work here, provided representatives of both the commission and the school board approach it co-operatively and harmoniously. The electorate expects at least that much of them.

Southern Ferry Links

THE COWICHAN LEADER—Transportation continues to be a live topic on the southern part of V.I. This district is directly involved in any loss of service suffered by Victoria and it cannot remain indifferent to current changes.

Doubling of the service on the Brentwood-Mill Bay ferry is announced for 1956. It would be easy to suggest that new terminal points be chosen for this run, for instance, between Cherry Point and Deep Cove, North Saanich area. As a means of getting from this district to Patricia Bay airport and Victoria, this change would lessen the road mileage at this end, and as far as Victoria as a destination is concerned, increase it at the south end, in the greater road distance on Saanich Peninsula.

However, there is one other projected service under consideration now. That is a fast service by Union Steamships between the B.C. mainland and either Sidney or Swartz Bay. If this came about, the new northern terminals which could replace the present Mill Bay-Brentwood service might assume greater interest.

Victoria is deserving of the best possible service it can have, consistent with sound economics. A reduced sea voyage between the inner harbor, Vancouver, and the inner harbor, Victoria, would seem extremely feasible, with a great saving in time.

Keep Those Hunting Privileges

PARKVILLE-QUALICUM BEACH PROGRESS — Complaints of vandalism which have arisen at Franklin River and other centres where logging companies have allowed access to their property for the purposes of hunting seriously jeopardize the continuance of this valuable privilege.

At the request of various fish and game associations, hunters who become members of those groups have been allowed access to excellent hunting grounds on the properties of various logging companies. Agreements between the fish and game bodies and the companies make it quite clear that all company regulations for prevention of fires and damage to timber and other company property must be strictly adhered to, and it is to their credit that the great majority of hunters have faithfully carried out their part of the bargain in return for these long-sought privileges. If, though, too many hunters become trigger-happy or cause needless damage, all hunters—the good and the bad—may soon be relegated to the limited areas in which they sought game in the past.

Bishop of Victoria Will Open New Langford Catholic Church

BY MRS. A. M. THOMAS

Times Langford Correspondent
LANGFORD—A cavalcade in which the Fourth Degree Knights of Columbus will escort His Excellency Most Rev. James M. Hill DD, Bishop of the diocese of Victoria, and the clergy to and from Langford, will take place Sunday for the formal opening of the new Catholic Church here at 4 p.m.

His Excellency will officiate at the official blessing of the church both inside and out. After the blessing the first mass will be said which will consist of a Pontifical Solemn Mass at which the bishop will officiate assisted by the local clergy. The bishop will also deliver the occasional sermon.

After the function the bishop and all the clergy of the diocese will be served dinner in the parish hall by the ladies of the Catholic Women's League.

GIVEN NEW NAME

The new church will be called Our Lady of the Rosary and the parish, consisting of Langford, Sooke and Metchosin, will be called Our Lady of the Rosary parish. The former name, 'St. Richard's,' will cease to exist.

The old St. Richard's Church was built 33 years ago by Frank Webb, who still resides in Victoria and was erected under the direction of the late Rev. J. Leterme. It accommodated 75 people. Last April the church was moved to the western side of the lot to permit the new church to be built on the same site. Work was begun on the new construction April 22.

The church was built entirely by voluntary workers with the exception of one foreman, John X. Ryan, formerly of Langford. The estimated value of the church is $40,000 but due to voluntary labor, the generosity of building supply firms, and assistance of various craftsmen, it has been completed for less than $20,000.

An eight-foot statue of the Blessed Virgin Mary, to be placed over the door in front of the main window on the outside of the church, and a large Crucifixion scene to be placed in the niche of the main altar, have not yet been completed. They are the work of the expert hand of Charles R. Seaford, federal government wood carver from Oberammergau. The recent cool weather has so impeded his work that they will not be completed in time for the opening.

The church is 70 by 40 feet, with an 18 by 15-foot addition

Mt. Brenton Golfers Re-Elect President

CHEMAINUS — A. E. Craig was re-elected president at the annual meeting of Mt. Brenton Golf Club for his third consecutive term.

Tom Young was named first vice-president and Mrs. S. Clement second vice-president. Joe Sandland was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Directors elected were Bob Bennie, George Hemmingsen, M. A. Anthony, Tom Stratton, Earl English, Frank Kilner, Alec Wilkinson and Elmer Hart. Jack Ross was named club captain.

Membership dues were increased by $5 a year.

A vote of thanks was extended to Reg Harwood for his work during the year as club captain. He was presented with a box of golf balls.

on the western side for a sacristy. The main floor will seat 240 people and another 60 can be accommodated in the gallery. The church is finished with an ivory tiled vaulted ceiling. The walls are finished in lilac and have a mahogany wainscoting. The floor is of linoleum tile in a marble design.

FINE DECORATIONS

Over the main altar is a 15-foot gothic dome finished in mahogany and there are 12 gothic windows in amber cathedral glass. The large gothic window, 12 by 12 feet, over the main entrance, contains alabaster, amber, and blue striped cathedral glass. The main entrance is finished in terrazzo, and on either side of the entrance doors the sides are of glass blocks. The doors were the work of Napoleon Bedard, and each is marked with a cross.

Red carpet covers the predella in front of the altar, and a strip leads from the altar to the communion kneeler, which also is covered with red carpet.

The 26 seats, 15 feet long, bear carved crosses. The confession booths are of mahogany.

An electric, suspended ceiling furnace has been installed with four wall outlets and five cold air intakes.

GOOD LIGHTING

Six drop lights of spun aluminum and seven flush lights, together with the light decorations, give a soft effulgence to the whole interior.

A bronze plaque on the balcony front is inscribed with 'Our Lady of the Rosary Church—In your charity kindly pray for our benefactors, especially Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Craig through the kindness of Rev. A. J. MacLellan-1955.'

The organ from St. Richard's Church has been placed in the balcony and furniture from the old church will be used in the sacristy.

The Catholic Clergy and Order of Sisters throughout the island have been invited and are expected to attend. Brothers of St. Louis College also have been invited. Rev. H. J. MacLellan of St. Jude's Church, Vancouver, a classmate of the pastor, Rev. W. J. O'Brien, will be present.

Enlargement of the parish hall, situated immediately behind the church will be the next undertaking of Our Lady of the Rosary Parish and will be constructed to bring it in line with the entrance to the sacristy.

There was nothing in Christ Jesus' entire ministry which said that his healing method was for then but not for now.

Christian Science has come as the promised Comforter to restore the lost element of healing to modern religion. It shows the sick, as well as others in need of help, how to claim and have their God-given freedom from fear, sickness, and want.

18 Victoria Daily Times SATURDAY, DEC. 3, 1955

In the welter of suggestions that have been made for the use of the capital city grant, or any other money available for the beautification of Victoria, there has been no mention, as yet, about setting aside further land for dedication as park area about Christ Church Cathedral.

The fact that some Victorians are not in agreement with the building of a cathedral at all may have been a deterrent to the suggestion that public lands be acquired for its beautification, but this should not be allowed to stand in the way of the fact that the cathedral exists, is being extended, and—personal opinions on its religious significance notwithstanding—it is one of Canada's most magnificent edifices.

Due to good judgment in the early days we have Pioneer Square on the north, and a little ground with trees on the south side. To the west, between Burdett Avenue and Courtney Street, is the old cathedral site. Couldn't arrangements be made to retain in park-like state (not as a parking lot) the eastern half of this ground, where the RCMP is now located? And if the corner to the northwest (part of which has recently been cleared as a parking lot) could be acquired, the whole might be part of the park area which would provide a fitting setting to a great man-made monument to the glory of God.

There are innumerable examples, in Europe, of magnificent cathedrals in crowded settings—even slum-like settings—and a start is being made in London, as a result of clearing due to war damage, to give cathedrals more breathing space.

Are we making the same sort of mistake that was made in the old lands hundreds of years ago? The area which bounds Christ Church is a small one, and our total park area in the city is not measuring up to what is recommended by modern planning.

Now is the time for action if future generations are to have the full benefit of today's labors. Let us make sure that we provide a setting for a work that is going to be the pride of the city for many hundreds of years to come.

Will Weekday Worship Supplant Sunday Service? Clergy Say No

BY KAREN SORESEN

Is it possible the church of tomorrow will put its maximum emphasis on an evening weekday service and that the Sunday morning services will be outmoded in another 15 years or so?

This is the feeling of a Pittsburgh minister, the Rev. Irving R. Murray, pastor of the First Unitarian Church. He says the change will be brought about by the growth of automation and a resulting increase in the leisure time of the average man.

"By 1970," says the minister, "churches fighting the old worn-out battle for the Sabbath 'blue laws' will find themselves increasingly empty, as on weekends, the members of a church congregation will be using their time increasingly for travel and recreation."

"It will do no good to try to oppose the inevitable, and it is arrogant of the churches to assume they have the right to impose the village, agricultural Sabbath of ancient times on modern urban, industrial peoples."

EMPHATIC NO.
The clergy in Victoria do not share the Pittsburgh minister's views.

Dr. F. E. H. James, minister of Metropolitan United Church and president of the Victoria Ministerial Association, regards them as plainly ridiculous.

"Sunday is the Lord's day and has been recognized as such from the early days of Christianity," says Dr. James.

"From the standpoint of the Christian religion Sunday must be recognized as a day for rest and relaxation and spiritual growth, no other day could possibly take the place of Sunday as the day of worship and training in the great principles of the Christian faith. Then, besides Sunday, there has always been a place for midweek worship in our church."

DIFFERENT CONCEPTION
Dr. Douglas Kendall, rector of St. Saviour's Anglican Church, feels convinced that increased travel over the weekends is not going to influence traditional Christianity.

"As a Unitarian Mr. Murray doubtless does not have the same conception of Sunday as do other Christian bodies," says Dr. Kendall. "His position is that of an ultra-realist."

"To the Christian whose Sunday is strongly and irrevocably linked with the Resurrection of Our Blessed Lord, no other day can equal it as a day of public thanksgiving and worship."

"No doubt there will be an increase in travel over the weekends, but traditional Christianity is so well established that the tourist or tripper will find the church open and services available."

conducted wherever his Sunday is spent."

NEVER HAPPEN
Rev. G. R. Easter of First Baptist Church, is not only opposed to the idea that church-going on Sundays should be changed to week days, but he also feels certain it will never happen. He says it is against the whole Christian maxim.

"Sunday is the Lord's day, it cannot be changed and Christian people are always going to revere it and keep it sacred," says Rev. Easter.

"It is easy enough to rationalize, but Sunday is the day of rest and when the whole nation rests together on the same day they rest better. And when they rest better they worship better. From the worship comes brotherhood, peace and good will."

"Some people believe that it does not matter what day you rest. So long as you have one day a week off they think it makes no difference. But it does from the simple reason that the very atmosphere in Sundays is worship."

"And if people were bereaved of the possibility of worshipping together on Sundays, you would not only undermine religion, you would undermine character."

PEOPLE FUNDAMENTAL

The Rev. J. E. Campbell, Free Methodist Church, also disagrees with the Pittsburgh minister.

"He is wrong if he thinks that more leisure time will interfere with religion," says Rev. Campbell. "People are fundamentally the same now as they were 100 years ago, and they will always be the same with regard to worship."

"What is suggested is that we make our worship a convenience, that we go to church when we have a free evening. But worship in this way would completely lack purpose."

"Despite the fact that we live in a time of growing automation, I think there is a movement towards God at the moment; I wouldn't say a great movement, but I do think there is a renewed evidence of hunger for God among the people. Billy Graham and his crusade gives partial evidence."

MADE FOR WORK

The Rev. Douglas Pilkey, pastor of Esquimalt United Church, expresses complete disagreement with the idea of weekday services supplanting Sunday. He does not believe either that the big mass of the population will get the amount of leisure time as maintained by the Rev. Murray.

"Man is made for work, and we would find ourselves in a decade age if the time should ever come where we could not find time from pleasures to worship God on Sundays."

"But I feel convinced that you will never take from anyone's life the desire to worship. People must find time, no matter how busy they are, for worship and for fellowship with other like minded and like thinking people."

"We now have a great amount of fellowship in the church during the week with each other. But the fellowship reaches its climax with our fellowship with God at public worship on Sundays."

"The very fellowship in Christianity has always been the worship on Sundays and will always be."

Lung Cancer Film Shows Here Tonight

"One in 20,000," color motion picture on lung cancer, will be shown tonight at 8 at the Seventh-Day Adventist Church, 983 Pandora.

The film reveals the actual case history of a young man who idly has his chest X-rayed and learns from his doctor that he has cancer of the lung. His only hope is the help of a skilled surgeon; that man he finds in New Orleans at a famous clinic.

At New Orleans the diagnosis is finalized, and a pneumectomy is prescribed. The entire operation, performed by the skilled surgeon, Dr. Alton P. Ochsner, is recorded in natural color, including the excision of the diseased lung. Medical facts reveal that this year, in the United States alone, 20,000 Americans will die of lung cancer.

The public is invited. The only charge will be an offering. The film is available for showing at high schools and clubs. Those interested may call 3-4623 for appointments.

Cordova Bay Home Says Hail and Farewell

Out on D'Arcy Lane at Cordova Bay, a comfortable home overlooking the water is humming with the excitement of one family going off on an extended travel tour and another family moving in to live. Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shaw are leaving with their three children on Dec. 10 for Toronto, where they will spend the next six months visiting friends and relatives. Mrs. Shaw will take part in a family reunion there, and next April will leave with her three sisters for a two-month tour of the British Isles and western Europe. When she rejoins her family in Toronto, they expect to spend some time touring in Canada and the United States before returning to Victoria in about a year's time. Mrs. Shaw is well known in Greater Victoria, where she was formerly a member of the Saanich council and is now Saanich representative on the Capital Region Planning Board and the Saanich Town Planning Council.

While the Shaws are away, the D'Arcy Lane home will be occupied by Dr. and Mrs. Robert Lawrence Wiggins and their small sons. The Wiggins family came from Edmonton in September to make their home here. Prior to that they spent five years in New York, where Dr. Wiggins was taking post-graduate work at the Columbia Presbyterian Medical Centre.

Mr. and Mrs. Percy B. Scurrah's interests include, not only the family home and an attractive garden, but three daughters, all married, and seven grandchildren, who keep the place merry and happy. From left to right the grandchildren are Murray Halkett, Eric Kjekstad, Barbara Jennings (on Mr. Scurrah's knee), Sandra Halkett, Deborah Jennings, baby Elizabeth Jennings (held by Mrs. Scurrah) and Paul Kjekstad. The children's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Halkett (June Scurrah); Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Kjekstad (Joyce Scurrah) and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Jennings (Patricia Scurrah).

Mrs. Robert Lawrence Wiggins with Paul, left, and Timothy.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Shaw with Jeffrey and Amanda. Roger was at Qualicum, where he attends the Qualicum School for Boys, when the picture was taken.

Dress in Your Prettiest For Yuletide Festivities

By PENNY SAVER

Christmas time is the time for pretty dresses and fun-filled parties. If you're going to go all-out and splurge on a new dress, come along with me and see the lovely ones I found—and at reasonable prices, too. For girls who love to wear a fashionable sheath, there's a pink brocade creation with two side pockets, and tiny satin buttons reaching from the mandarin collar, where a tiny bow of satin is, to the fitted waistline. There are small half sleeves. The pockets and collar are banded with pink satin. How much? It's $12.95.

Here's a novel princess style dress of champagne-toned taffeta with darts coming horizontally from the sides of the waistline and extending at angles into the fitted bodice. A flattering V-neckline extends to a cuffed V at the back. The skirt is full and made for stand-out crinolines. This dress costs $17.95.

To team up with your favorite black velvet or jersey evening blouse, here's a wide, wide circle skirt of yellow broad taffeta to steal your heart. This one's $12.95. You'll use it all during the winter season and right through next summer, too, 'cause they're tops in style, and adaptable to many occasions.

Chromesport shot taffeta catches the flickering evening lights, and adds excitement to any dress-up affair. The shimmering and rustling material is seen in many special dresses this year. For that "little suit" with many uses, take a look at these. Here's a dress with a gathered bodice, tiny shoulder straps and very full party-time skirt. For less formal occasions, don the matching fitted jacket that has tucked three-quarter length sleeves, and tiny white satin collar dotted with pearls. This dress will take you smoothly through the season. And it's priced! $19.95. Choose from black, light green, flaming red or old rose shades.

Here's a thought for you who have invested in a smart sheath. You often find that half slips are slightly gathered, and don't adapt too well to the sleek, smooth line of the fitted skirt, so what you need is a special half-slip. For $5.95 you can buy a taffeta one with side slits, and with a lace trimming at the hemline. In steel grey, turquoise, two shades of light brown or black, they'll help to make that dress give you the chic look you want.

AS WE LIVE

Prematurity Does Not Necessarily Mean Weakness

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

According to tradition, a prematurely-born baby will not grow up to be as healthy and strong as one who is born at full term.

Hurlock

(Q)—"I am an only child. I arrived in the world two months before I was expected; I weighed four pounds. I was in an incubator for several weeks and the doctor kept me in the hospital until I was nearly two months old."

"My parents have always been so afraid I would get sick or die that they have hovered over me all my life. I am very strong and healthy, never really sick, and would like to do what the other girls in high school do, but my parents are always telling me I'm not strong enough to do these things."

"Now the situation is getting worse. Every time a boy takes me on a date, my mother tells him to be sure to bring me home early as I am not very strong. This makes me feel like falling through the floor, but she doesn't stop there. She invariably tells the boy that I was a premature baby and they almost lost me."

"Her final word to me as I go out the door is not to 'dance too much' or not to 'overtire' myself. I am afraid boys will begin to think I am a 'weakling' and won't want to take me on dates."

(A)—It is very likely boys will think you are a weakling and, even worse, when you are older and the boys begin to think of marriage, they may wonder if they want to marry such a "delicate" woman. Your mother can prove to be a real obstacle to your matrimonial chances if she doesn't mend her ways.

I suggest you go to your doctor for a physical check-up and a heart-to-heart talk with him. Explain how your mother has always treated you, what she tells people, how she keeps you from doing what you feel you can do without hurting your health.

The doctor can tell, from the tests he makes, just how weak or strong you are and what you can safely do. Then have him talk to your mother and point out to her how unfair she is to coddle you now that you are a healthy young woman.

He should be able to convince her that the effects of your prematurity are a thing of the past.

Wood-Zozula Wedding Vows Solemnized in St. Aidan's

Miss Sonia Rose Zozula, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Zozula, 3614 Richmond road, exchanged vows with John E. Wood, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Wood, 530 View Royal avenue, in a ceremony in St. Aidan's United Church.

Rev. J. Lyn Clertue performed the ceremony in a setting of pink chrysanthemums.

Given in marriage by her father, the petite bride chose a white lace and net gown in floor-length, fashioned with sequins on the bouffant skirts, and on the collar of her matching lace jacket. A shoulder-length veil of net was held to a net and sequin headband, and she carried a bouquet of pale pink roses with white feathered carnations. Her only jewelry was a double strand of pearls, a gift of the groom.

Miss Anne Zozula was maid of honor for her sister, and chose a pale gold crystalline gown and a bouquet of bronze-chrysanthemums, matching her headband.

Best man was Alfred B. Wood, brother of the groom, and usher was Peter Zozula, brother of the bride.

Yellow and white chrysanthemums formed the background for the reception which followed at the home of the bride's parents. A three-tier wedding cake topped with pale pink roses centred the bride's table, and was flanked by candles in silver holders. Mrs. Zozula, in a navy blue dress, with white trim and hat, and pale pink carnation corsage, and Mrs. Wood, in a light blue dress and corsage of pink carnations, assisted in receiving guests. H. O. Fowler presided over the toast to the bride's happiness.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood have made their home at 250 Plowright road, View Royal.

The lovely, dark-haired bride chose a gown of Chantilly lace and nylon tulle over satin. The lace bodice featured a tulle yoke banded with lace, and the sleeves ended in lily points. The graceful, bouffant skirt had a lace panelled front and a lace pleated under which were billowing tiers of tulle over a crinoline and panniers. A heart-shaped headpiece of Chantilly lace and seed pearls held her tiered chapel-length veil of illusion net. She carried a cascade of gardenias and spilt red carnations, and wore a necklace of crystals, which had been worn by her mother at her wedding.

Attendants, Miss Lucille McBurney and Mrs. N. Kowalyk, wore red whisper taffeta ballerina-length dresses fashioned with empire waists. They wore matching red hats with illusion net veils and their white gloves were elbow-length. Round bouquets of red carnations and white chrysanthemums completed their ensembles.

Junior bridesmaid, Miss Linda French, wore a matching red dress with a colonial bouquet and flower hair band. Flower girl, Miss Penny French, wore a floor-length dress of white brocade nylon, and carried red and white flowers in a basket. Her headband was of matching blooms.

S. J. Mayze proposed the toast to the bride's future happiness. A beautifully decorated wedding cake flanked by silver candelabra centred the bride's table. Pale pink chrysanthemums in a silver bowl completed the picture. Autumn colored chrysanthemums decorated the buffet table.

The newlyweds left for a honeymoon trip to the mainland and into Washington, the bride wearing an Irish tweed suit with bronze accessories. When they return, Mr. and Mrs. Hitesman will live at 3895 Robbs Road.

"TERYLENE IN CANADA"—Last April I wrote a column entitled "Keep Your Eye on Terylene." The information and pictures were sent out from England after a big "Terylene" show in London. This advance publicity was released to arouse the interest of Canadian women in this man-made fibre as a $22 million plant was being constructed near Kingston, Ont.

The plant was officially opened on Sept. 28 and is being operated by Canadian Industries Ltd.

A "Terylene" fashion show and stage presentation was seen by about 1,100 representatives from B.C. department stores in the Hotel Vancouver early in November. A Vancouver department store was able to retain a few of the garments for a limited time and sent them to their store here to be shown at a recent fashion show. I saw and handled the garments, which were mostly sheers, in beautiful shades. A tartan suit however did show the combination of 50% Terylene and 50% wool.

The two distinct forms of "Terylene" make it suitable for a wide variety of uses. The filament yarn, which looks and feels much like silk, can be used for dresses, blouses, lingerie, housecoats, gloves and men's shirts. The staple fibre, which has a wool-like appearance and feel, is wonderful for suits, skirts, sweaters, coats, men's socks and hand-knitting yarns.

Properties which make "Terylene" a welcome addition to the fashion world are:

1. Warm to the touch: "Terylene" is comfortable to wear, soft and pleasant to handle.
2. Resists stretching and creasing: Garments hold their shape, unwanted wrinkles tend to fall out, and pleats which have been properly inserted remain, even through washing.
3. Quick drying—little ironing: Garments, especially those made from filament yarn, dry remarkably quickly. If allowed to drip dry, "Terylene" garments seldom need ironing.
4. Shrinkproof.
5. Mothproof and rotproof.
6. Very strong and hardwearing.

In the United States this fibre is manufactured by Du Pont and is known as "Dacron." As we do import ready-to-wear from the United States, you will no doubt see the Dacron label. Just remember all the qualities of Terylene also apply to "Dacron."

Nona

This after-ski ensemble has a hooded blouse and "Slim Jims" that fasten with tiny gold hooks. A full skirt lined in lime green jersey and appliqued with felt is worn over the pants. The costume, by Eve Lyn, is in navy blue fabric of 50 per cent "Terylene" and 50 per cent viscose.

Many of you will recall seeing this lovely dress in a recent fashion show where a special group of "Terylene" models were shown. Mushroom pleating, softly banded with bows down the back, forms a bell-shaped skirt on this short evening dress of 100 per cent "Terylene". This daffodil-yellow gown was created by Raoul-Jean Foure, president of the Association of Canadian Couturiers.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

Variety, Color in Clothes For Men Is the Trend Now

While we women would not choose to have our spouses appear in knee-length velvet pants, with lace ruffles at their collars, we are glad that they are adopting a bit more variety in style and color in their clothing.

It all began with flamboyant ties and brightly hued pyjamas. Years ago some very, very stylish men wore purple tuxedos. These were the VIPs (very important people indeed). Today, many men wear brilliant blazers and vests, Bermuda shorts and loafers and moccasins.

This is all to the good because men should dress more comfortably and more colorfully. After all, in bird life, the male has the brilliant plumage while the female looks downright mousy. We women certainly changed that around and it is about time the pendulum swung the other way.

If you think that this is something I have dreamed up let me quote a few statistics. In 1939 the sales ratio of sport shirts as compared to collar shirts was one to three. Last year sport shirts outsold collar shirts by 60 per cent. The demand for sport coats has zoomed. They now even have "back interest."

Men's hats which remained much the same for generations, have been pepped up. There is the small-brimmed hat, the Tyrolean model, and the homburg.

This year men can buy a regular two-piece suit, with pants and coat and matching shorts. If you women are getting a little worried because you have had a part in prodding men into a mild revolution so far as their dress is concerned,

Increased Space Needed For Decorations Festival

Interest in the Festival of Christmas Decorations, sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary to the Family and Children's Service, has increased to such an extent that it has been necessary this year to extend the space used for displays.

The affair, to be held on Wednesday, Dec. 14, afternoon and evening, in the Georgian Lounge on the lower floor of the Empress Hotel, will see display tables overflow into the wide corridor beyond the lounge.

Adding a highlight is the fact that Mrs. Frank MacKenzie Ross, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor, will visit the festival in the evening and present rose bowls and prizes to winners in the various classes at 9.30 p.m.

Entries are now being received in the following classes: Mantels, doors, table centres, miniature Christmas trees in natural or synthetic materials, and novelties. A new students' class has been added this year with entries from home economics classes in the Greater Victoria high schools (completed as individual projects) and from other young people of teen-age.

Further information as to entry forms may be obtained through Miss Lola Maxwell, 3-6759, or Mrs. A. Atherton, 3-2106.

Judging is by popular vote. Proceeds will be used to assist in furnishing of a new home for mentally disturbed children that has recently been opened by the Family and Children's Service.

Tickets for the affair may be obtained through Mrs. Campbell Sanson, 4-7553, or Mrs. E. McKenzie, 2-2583, or from any member of the auxiliary. There will be a table of Christmas decorations and corsages for sale under the patronage of Mrs. H. A. Brown and Mrs. J. McKay. A guessing contest will be conducted by Mrs. Nigel Morgan and Mrs. Barbara McGimpsey.

Donations Made—At last meeting of Victoria Women's Institute, with Mrs. T. C. Johns presiding, donations were voted to Queen Alexandra Solarium, Royal Jubilee Hospital, YWCA Travelers' Aid, CKDA Christmas Fund, Armistice Day Poppy Fund, Pastime Centre for Elderly Citizens, also executive honorariums and additional fees to Provincial Women's Institute board.

AIDE'S PLEA TO KING PUBLISHED IN FULL

New Book Peeks Behind Scenes Of Edward VIII's Abdication

LONDON (Reuters)—New facts have emerged on the abdication of King Edward VIII. Shortly before the storm burst in 1936 his private secretary wrote warning him of the danger of his position.

The king did not answer the letter—in writing or otherwise.

The existence of the letter to the king from his secretary—then Maj. Alexander Hardinge, now Lord Hardinge of Penshurst—came to light in a newly published biography of the late Geoffrey Dawson, editor of The Times.

TERMS REVEALED

Since publication of the biography, by Sir Evelyn Wrench, Lord Hardinge himself has revealed the actual terms of his letter to the king in an article in The Times. The letter read:

"Nov. 13, 1936.

"Sir, with my humble duty. As Your Majesty's private secretary, I feel it is my duty to bring to your notice the following facts which have come to my knowledge and which I know to be accurate:

"1. The silence of the British press on the subject of Your Majesty's friendship with Mrs. Simpson is not going to be maintained. It is probably only a matter of days before the outbreak begins. Judging by the letters from British subjects living in foreign countries where the press has been outspoken, the effect will be calamitous.

"2. The prime minister (the late Stanley Baldwin) and senior members of the government are meeting today to discuss what action should be taken to deal with the serious situation which is developing. As Your Majesty no doubt knows, the resignation of the government—an eventuality which can by no means be excluded—would result in Your Majesty having to find someone else capable of forming a government which would receive the support of the present House of Commons. I have reason to know that, in view of the feeling prevalent among members of the House of Commons of all parties, this is hardly within the bounds of possibility. The only alternative is a dissolution and a general election, in which Your Majesty's personal affairs would be the chief issue—and I cannot help feeling that even those who would sympathize with Your Majesty as an individual would deeply resent the damage which would inevitably

CHRISTMAS BUREAU ASKS AID IN ANNUAL DRIVE FOR NEEDY

More than 100 welfare groups, service clubs and associations in this area will centralize Christmas charity distributions through the Christmas Bureau this year.

The bureau is a Community Chest agency headed by chairman Mrs. Frederick Bliss.

Private citizens who can assist in collection or distribution of gifts for needy persons have been asked to phone 2-5121 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. daily prior to December 21.

The bureau will check lists of all suggested recipients to avoid duplication and ensure that no one listed is overlooked.

In 1954 hampers and toys were provided for more than 200 families.

ONE SOLUTION

"If Your Majesty will permit me to say so, there is only one step which holds out any prospect of avoiding this dangerous situation, and that is for Mrs. Simpson to go abroad without further delay, and I would beg Your Majesty to give this proposal your earnest consideration before the position has become irretrievable. Owing to the changing attitude of the press the matter has become one of great urgency."

The letter was written less than a month before the abdication which came Dec. 10.

Wrench, quoting from Dawson's diary, gives this passage:

"Nov. 13. Next day I paid another visit to Alec Hardinge at Buckingham Palace and he showed me, since I happened to be there, the draft of a letter to his Royal Master which he had felt impelled to write after a sleepless night. It was his first and only intervention—an admirable letter, respectful, courageous and definite. . . .

"He sent it off to Fort Belvedere that same Friday afternoon—and never had the slightest response or reference to it either in writing or by word of mouth."

EXPLAINS ROLE

Wrench, in his biography of Dawson, says his own record of the abdication "is merely an attempt to tell Geoffrey's part, perhaps only second in importance to that of Baldwin, in the abdication story."

Gas-Generated Power Proposed For Pr. George by Commission

B.C. Power Commission chairman T. H. Crosby Friday outlined a proposal to supply the Prince George area with electric power from a thermal plant fired by natural gas.

Mr. Crosby told Prince George Board of Trade year-long studies by the commission have shown a thermal plant, and not a hydro project, to be the most economical source of power in the central interior at present.

Gas would be obtained from Westcoast Transmission, which at only last week was given the final approval necessary for its gas pipeline from the Peace River to the Lower Mainland.

Mr. Crosby said the commission would purchase the Prince George city-owned diesel plant if the city agreed to the gas plant.

Suggested plant would have initial capacity of 15,000 to 20,000 horsepower. It would cost "two to three million dollars," and capacity could be increased in "packages" to a total of 80,000 horsepower.

Mr. Crosby said a hydro plant is ruled out at present by high costs, remoteness, interference with fisheries, excessive size of initial development, or a combination of these.

The commission investigated 22 possible hydro sites, at a total cost of nearly $250,000.

Education Minister Ray Wiliston, MLA for Fort George riding, promised full government support of the gas-fired thermal plant.

Scot Stamp Plan Rebuffed; Burns Won't Replace Queen

LONDON (CP)—The United Kingdom post office has turned down a suggestion that the face of Scotland's beloved poet Robert Burns replace that of the Queen on British postage stamps.

The suggestion was made in the House of Commons by Sir Thomas Moore, Conservative member for the Scottish riding at Ayr, as a method of commemorating Burns' bicentenary.

Dr. Charles Hill, the postmaster-general, replied that it is "traditional in this country that the head of the reigning monarch is the basic feature of all our stamps and I think there is no desire to depart from that."

Dr. Hill said the post office department had issued only 12 special stamps, each commemorating a great event such as the coronation rather than an illustrious individual.

Cuthbert Awport, Conservative member for Colchester, Essex, said he had a better suggestion for honoring Burns: "Reduce the excise duty on whisky."

What's news at Inco?

HOW THE NEW FLASH SMELTING PROCESS OPERATES—First, Inco installed a $2,000,000 plant to separate oxygen from the air—325 tons of it a day! Oxygen, piped from this plant, plus finely ground copper concentrate and flux are blown into a specially designed furnace and the mixture is ignited. Heat from the burning sulphur and iron smelts the ore and the molten copper matte is drawn off. In this process, sulphur and oxygen combine to form sulphur dioxide (SO₂). The sulphur dioxide is liquefied and sold for use in Canada's pulp and paper mills.

Civil Servants Ask $300 Wage Boost

An increase in federal civil service salaries of not less than $300 a year is asked by Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada in a brief to Finance Minister Walter Harris.

The announcement, made on behalf of 1,200 members of the amalgamation and the rest of Canada's more than 100,000 civil servants, followed a similar submission recently by the Civil Service Federation meeting with Prime Minister St. Laurent when a "substantial increase" in salaries was asked on behalf of all Canadian civil servants.

The brief, prepared by Trevor Gough, national secretary-treasurer of the amalgamation, points out that the government's package valuation on fringe benefits has become outdated.

It says the present $4 a week discount should be more like a dollar a week to keep civil service salaries closer in line with industrial composite figures, taking into account a $300 a year boost in salaries.

INCO RESEARCH HELPS STRENGTHEN CANADA'S ECONOMY

NEW FLASH SMELTING PROCESS SAVES 65,000 TONS OF COAL A YEAR

IN the production of copper at Inco, smelting operations used to require approximately 65,000 tons of imported coal every year.

Now, Inco is smelting copper concentrates without coal. A patented flash smelting process, developed after years of Inco research and extensive pilot plant tests, produces copper matte more economically than ever before.

The principle of the new flash smelting process is based on the fact that sulphur and iron, when combined with sufficient oxygen, will burn with an intense heat.

Since the ores mined at Sudbury contain high percentages of both sulphur and iron, Inco devised this method of smelting the ore.

In the flash smelting process, Inco employs hydro-electric power to freeze oxygen from the air. Coal is no longer necessary and sulphur is recovered as liquid sulphur dioxide. Hence, Inco's production costs are lower. Like so many other developments of Inco research the new flash smelting process has helped strengthen Canada's economic position in the world today.

Mayor's 'Censorship' Rapped by Scurrah

Harrison Has No Right to Keep Letters From Council, Mayoralty Candidate Says

Censorship of council mail by the mayor was protested by mayoralty candidate Percy B. Scurrah Friday night.

He attacked the 1954 procedure by-law, often dubbed the secrecy by-law, before a small audience at James Bay Community Hall. The by-law was a pet project of Mayor Claude Harrison.

"Any citizen writing to the mayor and council ought not to have his letter withheld by the mayor," Mr. Scurrah said.

Besides laying down procedure for every phase of council business, the procedure by-law stipulates that the mayor may dispose of mail to council at his discretion. It also bars reporters from council committee sessions.

NEUTRAL

Mr. Scurrah said he was neutral on the question of whether press members should be permitted in committees, but he was strongly opposed to censorship by the mayor.

He tackled this stand to the bottom of a list of 12 points upon which he will stand or fall in the elections next Thursday.

Mr. Scurrah was introduced by Mayor Taylor Spittal who said the candidate "... can contribute something which has been lacking a long time—dignity" at City Hall.

Mr. Scurrah punched home the point: "Nobody is more anxious to keep taxes down than I am." He said that during his four years on council, he was tagged by headline writers "Budget-Slashing Scurrah."

"I know the value of a dollar," he recalled his youth as a telegraph operator in a railway car deep in the Northern Ontario bush where he earned $2.50 a month.

"I panned my watch to eat more than once."

SEWER REPLACEMENT

He said that if the pay-as-you-go policy adopted in 1950 is continued the city should be debt-free in 1975. But he warned that Victoria's 160 miles of sewer will soon require replacement.

He said he knew where to go for more revenue—to the province for a statutory grant in lieu of taxes which are uncollectable for $8,000,000 worth of provincial buildings in the city.

He said the present $50,000 capital city grant given by the province is not enough and there is no guarantee it will continue. He said in 1951 he sold the Coalition government on an annual grant of $100,000 to the city, but the government fell before it was implemented.

He said he had reason to believe the grant could be obtained through proper negotiation.

MOST URGENT

He called the traffic problem the most urgent one facing council. Since 1944 our traffic has more than doubled while only one mile of new streets had been built. He said development of off-street parking is a must. The city should acquire lots in strategic locations and lease them to private operators for parking.

Net revenues from parking meters should be used for purchase of the necessary properties, he stated.

Mr. Scurrah shared his platform with five council candidates—Ald. M. H. Mooney, who outlined his council experience and offered to come back to James Bay and talk about civil defence; Elmer D. McEwen, who said he would urge a provincial school for policemen; Mrs. Lily (W. H.) Wilson, who said if she were elected she would give up her present teaching activities in hospital TB wards and night school, to devote herself fully to council work; Miss Jane Hall, who steered clear of platform promises, and Hugh Ramsay, who said he would work to hold down spending, speed amalgamation of essential services and promote better mainland ferry service.

Howe Disputes Bennett On Frobisher 'Delay'

RT. HON. C. D. HOWE ... "silly nonsense."

German Reds Threaten New Berlin Blockade

BERLIN (UP)—A West German government spokesman announced today the East German Communists have threatened free Berlin's lifelines by refusing to renew yearly shipping permits for barges bringing supplies to the Western sector.

The Communist refusal could halt all waterways traffic to West Berlin from West Germany Jan. 1.

It was a direct outgrowth of the Soviet demand for the transfer of control over German traffic to Berlin from Soviet authorities to German Communists.

In an open bid for recognition by the West, the Communists informed West German authorities in Bonn that the East and West German traffic ministries must negotiate on the future of canal traffic through the Soviet zone to West Berlin.

The Communist act underlined the Soviet and East German contention that East Germany now is sovereign and four-power agreements on Germany no longer are in force.

Western right of free access to Berlin and the right of free movement within all of Berlin is based on such four-power agreements.

The official mouthpiece of the East German Communist regime claimed a treaty the Reds signed with the Soviets gave them "unconditional" control of vital supply lines to free West Berlin.

The official Communist party newspaper, Neues Deutschland, said the treaty gave the Red regime full control over traffic between Berlin and West Germany. It failed to mention a Soviet promise to maintain Soviet control over Allied traffic.

Socred Talk 'Just Silly'

By TOM GOULD
Trade Minister C. D. Howe today described Premier W. A. C. Bennett's charge that Ottawa's Bill 3 has delayed the huge Frobisher development in northwestern B.C. "silly nonsense."

Premier Bennett said last week the federal government is entirely responsible for a delay to the $270,000,000 project, which the Frobisher interests is the result of "potentially serious international complications."

He said the Americans had been "aroused" by Canada's hard bargaining on the Columbia River basin, and particularly by the introduction of Bill 3—the International Rivers Act. Bill 3, enacted at the spring session of the House of Commons, clarified federal government control on all rivers and streams which flow across the International Boundary.

Any firm, or provincial government, wanting to construct a hydro dam, or water diversion project, on such a river, is required to obtain a federal permit.

Observers considered the bill was designed primarily to block B.C.'s deal with Kaiser Aluminum interests, who proposed construction of a $25,000,000 storage dam in B.C. on the Lower Arrow Lakes, to generate power on the Columbia River in the U.S.

Trade Minister Howe in an interview gave a firm denial to the premier's charge. He reaffirmed the national government's policy in the power-rich Canadian far north west.

He said statements that Bill 3 are responsible for the delay are "just silly."

And Mr. Howe said Robert Anderson, now head of the vast Frobisher - Ventures group, "called me up to say he was very disturbed at the remarks of Bennett in connection with Bill 3."

"If Frobisher wants a permit under Bill 3, they could have it tomorrow," said Mr. Howe.

CERTAIN RULES
The Frobisher project envisaged diversion of the headwaters of Yukon River, which originates in Canada, cutting off flow north through Alaska.

"It is a fact the Yukon River runs through the United States in Alaska. Nobody, however, knows if there are going to be complications," said Mr. Howe.

"And if there were, we would be on the side of Frobisher and Bennett."

"When a river starts in one country, and flows through another, and water or power is taken off in the first country, there are certain rules which apply."

Mr. Howe referred to the 1909 Treaty, under which the U.S. forced on Canada what is

Truman Apologizes For Lend-Lease Error

WASHINGTON (CP)—Former president Harry Truman has apologized for an inference contained in his recently published memoirs that Canada received U.S. lend-lease aid during the Second World War.

In a letter to Canadian Ambassador A. D. P. Heene, Truman expressed regret at the oversight and said it had been caught and corrected in the final proofs of his book, "Year of Decisions."

However, it had gone uncorrected in an installment of the memoirs appearing in the New York Times.

His letter, replying to one from Heene a month ago, expressed admiration for the fighting qualities of Canadian troops during the war.

In the installment appearing in the Times, Truman included Canadians among Commonwealth troops equipped with U.S. lend-lease weapons. Heene, in drawing his attention to the error, noted that Canada had operated its own mutual aid program and in fact had overpaid the United States for war equipment bought from the Americans.

ALL-STAR GAME

West, East Tie 6-6

FLASH

WEST 6, EAST 6

VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto (CP)—The West scored an unexpected touchdown in the second quarter to lead the East 5-0 today at half time in Canada's first all-star football game played on a muddy, rain-soaked field.

A crowd of about 15,000, braving disagreeable weather, saw Gordon Sturtridge of Saskatchewan Roughriders fall on a loose ball in the East end zone for the touchdown.

Sturtridge, a standout in the first half with a tremendous defensive effort, knocked the ball out of Sam Etcheverry's hands as the Montreal quarter-back tried to pass from the eastern end zone.

The West was in command through the first 30 minutes except for a brief period in the second quarter when the East marched to the westerners' one-yard line.

The drive was stopped when Sturtridge broke through to knock down a pithy bit by Toronto Argonauts' Tom Dublin, who dribbled the ball downfield.

Sturtridge, with several eastern players in pursuit, kicked the ball twice and Hal Waggoner of Hamilton Tiger-Cats raced from far behind to pounce on the ball at the East's two-yard line.

The western ground attack pushed the easterners back continually. Normie Kwong, Johnny Bright, Rolie Miles and quarter Jackie Parker, all of the Grey Cup-winning Edmonton Eskimos, burst through for good gains behind good blocking.

The east threatened only once when Kwong fumbled and Montreal's Jim Staton fell on the loose ball at the western 15-yard line.

They went to the one on ground plays but Sturtridge's dribbling, in which he kicked the ball down the field, took them back almost to their own goal line.

Manchester U. Leads League

LONDON (Reuters)—Manchester United climbed into first place in the First Division of English soccer today by edging Sunderland 2-1 as Blackpool slipped to second as a result of a 1-1 draw with Tottenham.

Blackpool led Manchester on goal average until today's games as the season neared the halfway mark.

Manchester had to struggle for its win and trailed 1-0 in the second half before banging in its two winning markers. Tottenham had to fight to hold spirited Blackpool to a draw.

There were no away winners in the top division. Preston North End, winless at home for the last three months, stopped Wolverhampton 2-0. The Wolves now have lost seven away games in a row.

Well, th' Trade Minister cert'nly has whut th' Americans call know-how.

Th' civic candidates are rar'n' t' go, an' I guess th' voters'll see thet some of 'em do.

Bin no mud-slingin' in th' campaign yet, but y' sure hear a lot about garbage.

Wreck in France Injures Eight; One 'Critical'

MONTMEDY, France (CP)—An RCAF transport plane carrying 17 Canadians crashed today as it was making a ground-controlled approach at the Marville air base in bad weather, killing six persons and injuring eight others.

A French farmer was the first person to arrive at the scene of the accident in this railway junction town near Marville and reported saving two officers and a woman member of the RCAF from the wreckage.

One of the injured is in critical condition.

Three escaped without injury and the seven others were only slightly hurt.

The plane, a twin-engine Bristol freighter used to supply and ferry Canadians between bases in England and on the Continent, came down in a clump of trees at 11:20 a.m.

NAMES WITHHELD
Names of the four-man crew and 13 passengers, many of them on their way home for Christmas, will not be announced until next-of-kin have been informed.

The Bristol, one of five based at Langer, England, was flying from Gros Tenquin, headquarters of the No. 2 Canadian Fighter Wing, to Marville to pick up more passengers before continuing the flight to Langer. Marville is headquarters of the No. 1 Canadian Fighter Wing.

The crash was believed to have occurred when the Bristol landed short of the Marville air strip during foggy weather. The plane was a complete wreck but did not catch fire.

The flight from Gros Tenquin to Marville was 62 miles. When the crash occurred, rescue teams from Marville base and the population of the nearby village turned out to drag the dead and injured from the wreckage.

RCAF officers and the local police opened an investigation to determine the cause of the accident.

Two Brothers Shot in Qualicum; Pensioner Faces Murder Try Count

Special to the Times
QUALICUM BEACH—A 64-year-old pensioner held in connection with the wounding of two brothers Friday afternoon will be charged with attempted murder, RCMP said today.

Daniel Parker, 15, was wounded in the arm and hand in the mystery attack. The weapon was a .22 calibre rifle.

His brother, William, 25, was shot in the arm. Both were reported "out of danger" in Nanaimo General Hospital, and were scheduled to have bullets removed today.

The alleged attacker, Daniel Francis O'Connor, was arrested Friday night and is being held in custody in Nanaimo.

According to police, the attack took place at about 5:30 p.m. between the Qualicum Beach Hotel and CPR station, while Daniel Parker was on his way home from school.

As the lad passed some bushes, a man leaped out, carrying a .22 rifle, and forced the boy at gunpoint to proceed up the road with him.

At this point Daniel's brother drove by on his way home from the village. He jumped from his car and went after the armed man, ignoring his threats. At that point the man fired three times at Daniel, hitting him in the arm and fingers, and once at William.

The older brother overpowered the attacker and took his gun away from him, while the younger boy telephoned the police from the home of a here.

FOR NEW YEAR'S PARTIES

The Attorney-General's Department is going to wink at New Year's Eve celebrants, until 2 a.m.

At least that is the interpretation placed on a news release from the A-G's Department Friday, which said celebration of New Year's Eve is a matter for local police administration, and added:

"In view of former practice, the Attorney-General's Department does not expect to receive complaints about public parties conducted up to 2 a.m."

New Year's Day this year is a Sunday, and by law all public parties must stop at midnight.

Biggest Dam Proposed for B.C.

VANCOUVER (CP)—An unnamed private company has proposed to Premier Bennett that it build the "largest dam in the world" on the Fraser River near Lillooet in exchange for sweeping Fraser River water rights.

Highways Minister Gagliardi made the first public announcement of the proposal.

The dam would cost $500,000,000 and generate 3,500,000 horsepower. It would be 790 feet high—bigger than the Hoover and Grand Coulee dams combined.

Vancouver Arson Suspects Held

VANCOUVER (BUP)—Police were questioning two suspected arsonists today following a wave of fires that broke out overnight.

Four of the blazes occurred at apartment blocks.

8 Charges Loom in Army Thefts

VANCOUVER (CP)—Possibly eight men will be charged with thefts from No. 11 works company of the Royal Canadian Engineers at Chilliwack, B.C., Defence Minister Campbell said here.

Irate Judge Warns RCN Sailors

HAMILTON, Bermuda (BUP)—Irate Magistrate Martin Godet warned today that he would "throw the book" at Canadian sailors hereafter.

Godet fined William Joseph Bennett, Maurice Herbert Delmore and James Duncan Morse for breaking a plate glass window, chasing children along the streets and hitting citizens.

The sailors were from the new anti-submarine vessel, HMCS St. Laurent, which docked here on her maiden cruise.

Sproat Lake Residents Hear Defence of Dam

PORT ALBERNI (Special)—Plans of MacMillan and Bloedel Ltd. for the raising of the low water level of Sproat Lake by two feet were reviewed Friday night by C. W. E. Locke, company engineer, at a stormy meeting of 125 members of the Sproat Lake Ratepayers' Association at the lake.

The development, Mr. Locke said, will provide the water necessary for the operation of the pulp and paper mill extensions under construction at Alberni.

Plans call for construction of a dam in the Sproat River that will raise the lake's low-water level by two feet. It will not affect the high water level.

"Fishways in the dam actually will permit the lake to drop to its normal low water level in an exceptionally dry year," Mr. Locke said. Variation of the lake between its all-time low and high levels is 11 feet, he said.

Association members feared the development would harm their lake front properties, and that perhaps the low dam was a "thin end of the wedge."

"I think the meeting was less hostile at the end than at the beginning," Mr. Locke said.

The company's plans have been reviewed and approved by the water rights branch of the provincial government, he said. Added water storage will be needed to serve the mill, which will produce 300 tons of newsprint, 350 tons of unbleached sulphate pulp, and 100 tons of coarse paper and board daily.

Howe Disputes
Bennett's View

By TOM GOULD

Trade Minister C. D. Howe today described Premier W. A. C. Bennett's charge that Ottawa's Bill 3 has delayed the huge Frobisher development in northwestern B.C. "silly nonsense."

Premier Bennett said last week the federal government is entirely responsible for a delay to the $270,000,000 project, which the Frobisher interests is the result of "potentially serious international complications."

He said the Americans had been "aroused" by Canada's hard bargaining on the Columbia River basin, and particularly by the introduction of Bill 3—the International Rivers Act. Bill 3, enacted at the spring session of the House of Commons, clarified federal government control on all rivers and streams which flow across the International Boundary.

Any firm, or provincial government, wanting to construct a hydro dam, or water-diversion project, on such a river, is required to obtain a federal permit.

Observers considered the bill was designed primarily to block B.C.'s deal with Kaiser Aluminum interests, who proposed construction of a $25,000,000 storage dam in B.C. on the Lower Arrow Lakes, to generate power on the Columbia River in the U.S.

Trade Minister Howe in an interview gave a firm denial to the premier's charge. He reaffirmed the national government's policy in the power-rich Canadian far north west.

He said statements that Bill

Six Canadians Die
In RCAF Air Crash

MONTMEDY, France (CP)—An RCAF transport plane carrying 17 Canadians crashed today as it was making a ground-controlled approach at the Marville air base in bad weather, killing six persons and injuring eight others.

A French farmer was the first person to arrive at the scene of the accident in this railway junction town near Marville and reported saving two officers and a woman member of the RCAF from the wreckage.

One of the injured is in critical condition.

Three escaped without injury and the seven others were only slightly hurt.

The plane, a twin-engine Bristol freighter used to supply and ferry Canadians between bases in England and on the Continent, came down in a clump of trees at 11:20 a.m.

Names of the four-man crew and 13 passengers, many of them on their way home for Christmas, will not be announced until next-of-kin have been informed.

The Bristol, one of five based at Langar, England, was flying from Gros Tenguin, headquarters of the No. 2 Canadian Fighter Wing, to Marville to pick up more passengers before continuing the flight to Langar.

Marville is headquarters of the No. 1 Canadian Fighter Wing.

The crash was believed to have occurred when the Bristol landed short of the Marville air strip during foggy weather. The plane was a complete wreck but did not catch fire.

The flight from Gros Tenguin to Marville was 62 miles.

Truman Apologizes
For Lend-Lease Error

WASHINGTON (CP)—Former president Harry Truman has apologized for an inference contained in his recently published memoirs that Canada received U.S. lend-lease aid during the Second World War.

In a letter to Canadian Ambassador A. D. P. Heene, Truman expressed regret at the oversight and said it had been caught and corrected in the final proofs of his book, "Year of Decisions."

However, it had gone uncorrected in an instalment of the memoirs appearing in the New York Times.

His letter, replying to one from Heene a month ago, expressed admiration for the fighting qualities of Canadian troops during the war.

In the instalment appearing in the Times, Truman included Canadians among Commonwealth troops equipped with U.S. lend-lease weapons.

Heene, in drawing his attention to the error, noted that Canada had operated its own mutual aid program and in fact had over-paid the United States for war equipment bought from the Americans.

QUALICUM BEACH—A 64-year-old pensioner held in connection with the wounding of two brothers Friday afternoon will be charged with attempted murder, RCMP said today.

Daniel Parker, 15, was wounded in the arm and hand in the mystery attack. The weapon was a .22 calibre rifle.

His brother, William, 25, was shot in the arm. Both were reported "out of danger" in Nanaimo General Hospital, and were scheduled to have bullets removed today.

The alleged attacker, Daniel Francis O'Connor, was arrested Friday night and is being held in custody in Nanaimo.

According to police, the attack took place at about 5:30 p.m. between the Qualicum Beach Hotel and CPR station, while Daniel Parker was on his way home from school.

As the lad passed some bushes, a man leaped out, carrying a .22 rifle, and forced the boy at gunpoint to proceed up the road with him.

At this point Daniel's brother drove by on his way home from the village. He jumped from his VARSITY STADIUM, Toronto (CP)—The East and West battled to a thrill-packed 6-6 tie today on a muddy and rain-soaked field in Canada's first all-star football game, climaxed by a wild finish.

A dull, uninspiring game erupted into a sensational ending in the final moments when both teams were fouled in attempts to break the deadlock or seldom-seen kick returns.

The game was sponsored by the Shrine and the Toronto Star Weekly. Proceeds will go to Shrine hospitals for crippled children at Montreal and Winnipeg.

A crowd of 15,083, kept down by rainy weather that started at mid-morning and continued almost throughout the game, cheered wildly as the cream of Eastern and Western teams smashed around in the mud.

There was less than a minute to play when the West was turned back in its bid for victory. Bob Heydenfeldt of the Grey Cup winning Edmonton Eskimos punted into the eastern end zone and Cam Fraser promptly footed the ball back to him.

Booted Ball Into Parker's Arms

Tom Dublinski, Toronto quarterback and star of the eastern line-up, passed 42 yards to Al Pfeiffer of the Argonauts to bring the East within kicking range for a single point.

Fraser booted a high ball into the arms of Jackie Parker, western quarter, who immediately kicked the ball back as the gun sounded to end the game.

The western team was given another play because Parker was roughed during the kick. The westerners froze the ball in one of the most unusual endings of a football game in the country's history.

Play-by-play description of the game follows:

FIRST QUARTER

The game started nearly 25 minutes late with the Shrine taking longer than expected for pre-game ceremonies.

Scott kicked off for the East and Miles ran the ball to the West 33. Parker, nearly trapped as he went back to pass, fired to Kwong for a four-yard gain. Kwong took a handoff from Parker and went nine yards to the West 42. Kruger and Parker could get only five yards in two ground plays and Heydenfeldt kicked to Simpson at the East 27.

Tracy smashed for three yards and Kussner couldn't hold a pass from Etcheverry. Fraser kicked to Kruger at the West 45. Parker swept around the end for eight yards and was knocked out of touch. Kwong plunged for 13 to the east 45. Kwong and Bright hit the line again for 13 yards on two ground plays to the East 32.

The West could not pick up six yards in two ground plays. Wilsey on a fake field goal attempt scampered 11 yards to the East 15 but the drive was halted when Patterson intercepted a Parker pass in the end zone.

The East was unable to pick up a first down and Fraser kicked 43 yards to Kruger who ran the ball back to the West 52. Kwong was short of a first down in two plunges and on a third down gamble went off tackle to the East 46 to move the yardsticks.

The West picked up two yards on two line plunges and Heydenfeldt kicked out of touch at the East two-yard line. After Abbruzzi plunged for three, Etcheverry passed to O'Quinn at the 20. A pass to Pfeiffer was incomplete at the 25 and Patterson took one down the middle to the 39.

Etcheverry was thrown for a 10-yard loss and missed on another pass attempt to O'Quinn. Rowland took Fraser's kick at the West 36 and was downed at the 39 as the quarter ended. First quarter over: West 0, East 0.

SECOND QUARTER

Miles took a 14-yard pass from Parker and Bright crashed through the centre for 16 yards to the East 31. Bright and Kwong picked up nine yards on two ground plays and Bright went for the first down at the East 16.

Miles and Parker went for five yards on two plays. Parker missed getting a first down by a yard on a quarterback sneak, the East taking over on its own nine-yard line.

Marlow broke through and on a shoe string tackle threw Etcheverry for a six-yard loss. On the next play Etcheverry, attempting to pass from his own end zone, had the ball knocked out of his hand and Sturbridge fell on it for a touchdown. Parker's convert attempt was blocked and the West led 5-0.

On the kickoff, Miles, standing beside the ball, booted towards the side lines but the ball did not go 10 yards in front and the West had to kick over again from the 35. The West was offside on the second kickoff and was penalized another 10 yards forcing another kickoff. Waggoner took the kick and raced 26 yards to the West 52. Dublinski, in the game for the first time, shot a screen pass to Rowland took Fraser's long punt and raced out of the end zone to the 19. On second down Kwong fumbled and Stator recovered for the East at the West 15. Abbruzzi took a handoff from Dublinski and swept around the end to the two-yard line where he was knocked out of touch. On the next play, the East was offside. Abbruzzi plunged to the one-yard line.

Sturbridge broke through and knocked down a Dublinski pitch-out. The West dribbled downfield to the East two-yard line where Waggoner fell on it with three western players around him.

On second down, Dublinski ran wide in the end zone and passed to Patterson at the East 31. Abbruzzi picked up five yards on a plunge and Tracy went for 13 yards down the middle to the East 49 on a trap play.

Dublinski missed on a pass to
